WLB Vote Today Likely To Approve Coal Pact

Some Members Feel Put on Spot By Ickes' Already Concluding Contract

By Ben W. Gilbert

The Ickes-Lewis coal wage agreement last night appeared slated for acceptance by the War Labor Board, although some members indicated that they would have to disapprove it, but for the fact that to do so might precipitate a new coal crisis.

A vote on the pact was scheduled for 11 a. m. today.

WLB public members were said to feel that they were placed squarely on the spot when Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes signed a contract with President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers Wednesday as the price of persuading the country's 530,000 coal miners to end the fourth general coal strike this year.

Rule Violated

It was pointed out that making the agreement violated a long-standing WLB rule against bargaining with strikers. At the same time, some members felt that coal operators were being deprived unlawfully of their property rights by being confronted with a completed agreement covering their industry to which they were not a party.

The attitude of the public members was to place responsibility for the situation on President Rosevelt's doorstep.

Appointment of Ickes to operate the mines for a second time with authority to sign a contract with Lewis was the chief presidential act drawing WLB objections. The board would have preferred an independent coal mines administrator having no previous connection with the coal case, instead of Ickes who quarreled repeatedly with the board during Government operation last spring.

The executive order giving Ickes the mine-operating job did not deal with the question of bargaining with strikers. In debating the question yesterday, members of the board representing the AFL took the lead to argue that the board had no choice but to approve the agreement since President Roosevelt had authorized the bargaining.

See Raise Demands Encouraged

Other board members acknowledged that refusal to approve the agreement would precipitate a fifth general coal strike which might wreck war production. However, it was also argued that prevention of a fifth general coal strike this year might boomerang by encouraging other unions to emulate the United Mine Workers and strike to win wage demands.

GOP Is Conceded Sweeping Upset In Kentucky Vote

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 4 (AP).—Virtually complete but unofficial reports on Tuesday's general election showed tonight that Republicans were elected Governor, Lieutenant Governor and six out of nine of the other State offices in a sweeping upset.

Simeon S. Willis of Ashland defeated J. Lyter Donaldson of Carrollton, Democrat, to become Kentucky's sixth Republican Governor next month and the first of his party to win the office since Flem D. Sampson was elected in 1927.

Reports from all but nine of the State's voting precincts gave Willis, former Appellate Court judge, a margin of 8067 over Donaldson, lawyer-banker and former State highway commissioner.

The vote was Willis 278,219 and Donaldson 270,152.

These reports gave Kenneth H. Tuggle, Republican, a close margin of 804 votes over William H. May present Democratic commissioner of agriculture, for Lieutenant Governor.

Grimly Pleads for Life

'No!' Cries Marigny on Stand To Query, 'Did You Kill Oakes?'

Nassau, Bahamas, Nov. 4 (AP). Grim-faced and earnest, Alfred de Marigny pleaded for life and liberty today with an emphatic denial that he slugged his aged father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, and left him to die in a flaming bedroom.

Near the end of his day-long appearance, he suddenly was asked by defense counsel Godfrey Higgs:

"Did you kill Sir Harry Oakes?"

The witness threw back his head and his eyes flashed:

"No, sir! No, sir!" was his firm-voiced reply, almost a shout.

There was ill-feeling, he admitted, but De Marigny said he was five miles away, in his own home and bed, about the time the multimillionaire gold miner was attacked last July in his ocean-front estate, Westbourne.

For 15 days of his trial for murder in the Bahamas Supreme Court, the handsome husband of Sir Harry's daughter Nancy had flirted and yawned with a don't-care manner while he sat in a cage-like prisoner's dock and listened to the Crown build a web of circumstantial evidence around him.

But when he stood on the witness stand today and faced all of the curious spectators who could be crammed into the small courtroom, he was a fervent, deadly serious man begging for belief in his story.

Prompted by Higgs, De Marigny related in his clear, French-accented voice the details of his courtship and marriage to Nancy and of his subsequent troubles with her family after she underwent an operation for the termination of pregnancy.

Relations with Sir Harry reached a breaking point last March 30, he said, during a 4 a. m. quarrel which started when Sir Harry came to the De Marigny home, yanked his young son Sidney out of bed and told him to "get the hell out of this house."

"I never spoke to him again," De Marigny declared, while his audience listened in a profound hush.

During an earlier quarrel, he said, Sir Harry referred to 19-year-old Nancy as "that girl in your house," who has "caused trouble for her mother and me and I don't want anything to do with her."

"He said as far as he was concerned, Nancy was going to get nothing from him, and he spelled out nothing in a loud voice," De Marigny added.

It was when Higgs asked him to tell about his activities during the night of the slaying, July 7-8; that De Marigny made his big bid for freedom.

He clasped his hand in a prayer-like gesture and launched into his account. There was a dinner

Check Presented By Lord Halifax; $799,986 Needed

Tendering a check for $28,254 from British and Dominion Missions in the United States, Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, was given a rising ovation at a Community War Fund meeting in U. S. Chamber of Commerce, during which the to-date fund campaign total was reported as $4,000,014, or 83.34 per cent of the District quota of $4,800,000, yesterday.

With the campaign going into its sixth week, and $799,986 yet to be raised, Campaign Chairman Coleman Jennings announced that two meetings will be held November 10 and 12, and predicted these would be final, with the District quota oversubscribed.

Emphasizing importance of the Community War Fund, Lord Halifax said:

"First, it is to help deserving causes in this city, to support day nurseries, playgrounds, hospitals and other institutions for welfare and happiness of people in the District.

"Secondly, it is to support the USO, which is carrying on splendid work for the Armed Forces of the United States on whatever front they are fighting.

"Thirdly, it is to give assistance to your fighting allies.

"I am thinking of mobile kitchens, ambulances, and hundreds of forms of help made possible to British War Relief through generosity of the most generous people in the world."

Anxious to Help

In handing the check to Chairman Jennings, the famed Briton declared:

"We were anxious to do what we could to support this appeal."

Contributors to the $28,000 check were members of the British Embassy, the Indian Agency General, and the British and Canadian Missions in Washington.

Yesterday's standings of the four major drive units were:

Advance Gifts, $490,477, or 89 per cent of quota of $550,000; Metropolitan Division, $188,597, or 63 per cent of quota of $300,000; Business and Finance Division, $1,240,885, or 92 per cent of quota of $1,350,000, and the Government di-

Postwar Policy Amendments Thrown Out

Senate Prepares For Final Vote on 177-Word Statement

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate yesterday started cutting through a bundle of amendments in an effort to vote finally today on the 177-word minimum statement of postwar principles it will present to the country as its own.

Rejected by majorities so large they spelled overwhelming approval of the strengthened Connally foreign-policy declaration were amendments aimed at further elaboration of peace aims and reassertion of treaty-ratifying rights.

So settled was the Senate on its compromise postwar formulae that it defeated by a vote of 70 to 15 an amendment by Senator John A. Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut inserting terms of the Atlantic Charter.

Held Excess Verbiage

By the closer vote of 54 to 28, Senators cut away a second amendment by Senator Chapman Revercomb (Republican) of West Virginia specifying the United States shall participate by treaty only in an association of nations for peace.

Administration Senators contend the resolution already provides that any treaty made to carry out Moscow's declaration for a world league must be ratified by two-thirds of the Senate; that the Revercomb amendment was just excess verbiage.

Blocked Three Times

Three times Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally attempted to cut short the nine-day-old flow of debate to reach an early vote, but each time he was blocked by a single objection.

Once Connally became riled when Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana said he would have to object because a Senator wanted to make an hour's speech.

"He's got to be in here to make a speech," shot back Connally. "He can't speak over in his office."

Earlier Connally was thwarted by Senator William Langer (Republican) of North Dakota, after requesting a vote in late afternoon.

A Woman's Privilege

Fight Over Baby Held Proof Of Need for Adoption Control

By Joseph Paull

Justice James W. Morris said yesterday, "This is the perfect example of why there should be some legislation regulating those who arrange adoptions" as he pondered the case of a 6-month-old illegitimate baby girl and its 17-year-old mother who first gave away the child but now has changed her mind and wants it back.

The names of the parties in adoptions are secret by order of the court, but the facts of the case may be disclosed. The couple who want to adopt the baby are of moderate means, and the natural mother, a pretty girl, is currently unemployed but told the court she will get a job to support the child.

The case arose in the first test of the District adoption law, when the mother, who previously had given her consent both before and after the child was born to the persons who wish to adopt the child, stated that she had made the decision when she was upset. Before Justice Jennings Bailey last month, she said she had revoked her consent.

Justice Bailey ruled that the law gives her the privilege to do so at any time before the adoption becomes final.

The child was born in nearby Maryland and the doctor who delivered it arranged for the adoption.

The case came to Justice Morris yesterday on a habeas corpus petition, in which the natural mother sought to have custody restored to her. The case was argued by Attorneys Alvin Neumeyer and Catherine McCloskey. At the conclusion of the hearing, Justice Morris refused to play Solomon in the bewildering case, and instead suggested to the contesting parties that they agree to a status quo for the present.

The dilemma was this: If the petition for habeas corpus was granted and the Court of Appeals should grant the adopting parents the right to the child, the child would be shifted first to the mother, then to those who wanted to adopt and then back again. The opposite decision might result in a similar situation.

Instead, all parties concerned agreed to continue the habeas

Reds Put New Nazi Losses At 2,700,000

Total Casualties Since Present Push Started, Soviet Says; Russians Continue to Gain

London (Friday), Nov. 5 (AP).—Germany has suffered 2,700,000 casualties, nearly one million of them killed or captured, during four months of a still-rolling Red army offensive which threatens to hurl the Nazi army out of Russia this winter, a special Moscow announcement disclosed last night.

Since July 5 when the Germans "failed disgracefully" in their own brief offensive in the Orel-Kursk-Belgorod salient, the Russians have killed 900,000 Germans and captured 98,000, half of them wounded, said the special war review.

The review, recorded by the Soviet radio monitor here, was repeated three times by the radio and followed by an "Ode to Stalin," the premier-marshal, sung by the Red army choir.

On the basis of previous official Moscow reviews, the Germans have suffered 9,100,000 casualties since they began the most sanguinary war in history with the invasion of Russia June 22, 1941.

Reds Capture Dimer

Just before this triumphant announcement the regular daily communique announced that Red armies had swept up to the lower Dnieper River opposite Kherson, the Black Sea port on the west bank near the river's mouth, had captured the west bank highway town of Dimer, only 20 miles north of the Ukraine capital at Kiev, and reached a point only 54 miles from the Latvian border in a renewed drive from the Nevel sector on the north central front.

Berlin broadcasts recorded by the Associated Press also disclosed that fresh Russian shock troops had landed on three-day-old bridgeheads near Kerch, at the eastern tip of the Crimea, which already had been sealed off on the north by Gen. Feodor Tolbukhin's victorious steppe armies clearing the Nogaisk steppes.

General Tolbukhin's forces were preparing to hurdle that broad barrier to link up with two other Russian armies tightening the sack on tens of thousands of Germans fighting between Rog and Dnepropetrovsk, inside the river's big bend.

The Russians swept up 30 more towns in their final clean-up of the steppes between the bend and

Record Attack Rains 2000 Tons Of Bombs on City In 27 Minutes

By Gladwin Hill

London, Nov. 4 (AP).—The RAF's great night fleet poured 2000 long tons of bombs into Duesseldorf in 27 minutes last night with a record saturation attack capping a blazing 18 hours in which British and American bombers together rocked Nazi targets with a total of 4000 tons of bombs, the greatest day-and-night tonnage in history.

RAF bombers were heard roaring out toward the Continent early in the night, flying above clouds as they crossed the southeast coast.

London experienced a brief alarm as enemy nuisance raiders made their fourth thrust toward the capital in five nights, but no incidents were reported.

The Duesseldorf assault was described by the Air Ministry as "concentrated and effective," and it left the Ruhr steel and armament city second only to Hamburg as the most heavily bombed spot in the world.

Bombs fell at the rate of 74 tons a minute. The RAF's previous record was 51 tons a minute in one of the Hamburg raids.

1000 Planes in Raid

This raid and related attacks on Cologne and other Nazi targets came in trip-hammer fashion after yesterday's American daylight raid on Wilhelmshaven, in which a record 1000 planes participated and 1500 tons of bombs were dropped.

At dusk tonight coastal observers reported sighting waves of raiders flying out over the English southeast coast toward the continent in a continuation of these blows. The Berlin radio later said several places in western Germany were hit.

As Duesseldorf was battered, a small secondary RAF force attacked the rail center of Cologne, 25 miles away. The Germans again protested that the world-famous Cologne cathedral had been damaged. Similar claims before have not been substantiated, and after the last raid the German architect in charge of the cathedral said the damage was "relatively small."

Nazi Defense Split

The Cologne diversion, coupled with the American daylight attack 175 miles to the north on Wilhelmshaven a few hours previously, split the German aerial defense so effectively that losses were relatively small. From a force of possibly 700 or more planes, the RAF lost 1? or less, a communique figure of 19 embracing simultaneous Mosquito raids over western Germany,

Enemy Cruiser, 4 Destroyers Sent to Bottom Off Bougainville

U. S. SUBMARINES sink 10 more Jap ships and damage three. Page 3.

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Friday), Nov. 5 (AP).—A Japanese cruiser and four destroyers were sunk in the Navy battle of American and Japanese warships near the Allies' Bougainville beachhead, it was announced officially today.

Radio Tokyo previously had conceded the loss of a cruiser and two destroyers in the battle fought Tuesday morning.

The battle, which lasted more than two hours, occurred when enemy units were intercepted heading toward the Empress Augusta Bay sector on Bougainville's west coast where American Marines landed the day before.

Two other Japanese cruisers and destroyers were hit. No Allied vessels were lost in the naval fight.

The Japanese force, believed to consist of four cruisers and eight destroyers, was met 40 miles from Empress Augusta Bay. The intense phase of the action lasted 90 minutes, but South Pacific headquarters said the time of the fight and the subsequent pursuit of the fleeing enemy amounted to more than two hours.

Later the Japanese sent over 68 planes to attack the fleet units and 17 were downed. Thirty miles south of Bougainville, where the first phase of the northern Solomon invasion opened October 27 with invasion of tiny Treasury Island by American and New Zealand forces, all organized enemy resistance has ceased.

CAPT. ALBON B. HAILEY, former Washington Post sports reporter, one of the P-38 pilots who got a Jap plane when the Americans made their devastating attack on Rabaul last Tuesday. The announcement revealed for the first time that "Al" has become a captain.

The fight against an estimated 200 Japanese there terminated Wednesday, exactly a week after the invasion opened.

Adding to the Japanese losses later on the same day of the naval fight were three destroyers and eight large merchantmen sunk and two heavy cruisers damaged by MacArthur's bombers during a heavy raid on shipping at Rabaul.

8th Army Takes Isernia, Middle Hinge; Clark's Force Moves Up

By Noland Norgaard

Algiers, Nov. 4 (AP).—Striking boldly in predawn darkness, British and Canadian troops of Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army captured the vital road junction of Isernia at the central hinge of the German line early today as the enemy reeled back in almost every sector of the Italian Front.

On the Fifth Army Front near the Mediterranean coast beaten Nazi troops streamed across the 14-mile-wide Garigliano Valley toward their next refuge in the Aurunci Mountain Range, closely pursued under clearing skies by British and American forces that knocked them from their elaborate positions on Massico Ridge and San Croce Mountain in bitter fighting yesterday.

(A Berlin broadcast recorded by Reuters said British troops had sought to land in the rear of German lines in eastern Italy, but that "this attempt collapsed under the fire of German artillery and the enemy suffered great losses.")

The improved weather enabled Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark to rush quantities of tanks and heavy artillery into the pounding pursuit of the Germans along the two main highways to Rome, less than 85 miles away.

Whole Nazi Line Threatened

With the capture of Isernia the whole German defense system in the mountainous center of the fighting front was threatened. The fall of the big road junction to Montgomery's troops at 3 a. m. after a swift 7-mile advance and smashing night attack brought the Eighth Army to within 90 miles of the Italian capital. Loss of the city deprived the Germans of the only good lateral road between the two wings of their line.

The enemy's flight across the Garigliano Valley was being carried out under the protection of the most extensive demolitions and mine fields yet left in the path of the Allies' inexorable advance.

At the end of yesterday's fighting, Clark's troops had clawed their way beyond the town of Sessa Aurunca, which is on the main coastal road (the Appian Way) only about 4 miles from the Garigliano River. In reaching Sessa Aurunca, British troops fought through a narrow, heavily-defended corridor on the inland side of Massico Mountain.

Enemy Counterattacks

Scores of towns and villages were swept up as the Fifth Army dug out gains of from 5 to 8 miles along a 40-mile front. In addition to Sessa Aurunca, Clark's forces took Roccamofina, at the foot of San Croce Mountain, and Presenzano, only 7 miles south of Venafro, one of the enemy's main central bastions. An Allied communique described these as "satisfactory advances."

A savage battle was reported raging around the railway station of San Salvo at the Adriatic end of the front, where the Eighth Army gained its original bridgehead across the Trigno River. The Germans threw at least 20 tanks into furious counterattacks, but at the end of a day of bloody fighting Montgomery's men were reported to have driven them back, gained some new ground and taken prisoners.

Inland the Eighth Army pressed through 11 more towns and villages, including Roccamandolfi,

Nazi Plight Seen Worse Than in 1918

Bern, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Swiss weekly, Die Nation, asserted today that conditions inside Germany were "much worse than 25 years ago" and said the cumulative effect of Allied air raids was having a vital result on German morale.

Eight million bombed-out or evacuated citizens, approximately one-tenth of the country's population, compose the core of defeatism and discouragement which Heinrich Himmler's Gestapo is striving to combat, Die Nation said.

The weekly declared that "every bombardment increases the number (of victims) by thousands or tens of thousands."

Since a previous visit to Germany six weeks ago, the writer of the article declared, "the panic of the people of Berlin has by no means abated." He said the "bitter silence" of the population is mostly the result of action taken by Himmler immediately after he became interior minister.

The article said that mistrust within the German nation has increased to such a degree that "it is now reported that certain sections of the population must give up their radio sets.

Free Albania Is Pledged By Churchill

Declaration Taken As Indication of Thrust in Balkans

London, Nov. 4 (AP).—An Albania "freed from her Axis yoke and restored to her independence" was pledged by Prime Minister Churchill in reply to a question in Commons today.

At the same time, he disclosed that British liaison officers are operating with Albanian guerillas who, he said, are counted upon to play their part "in future military developments in the Mediterranean area."

This hint, the broadest yet from any high Allied authority that United Nations arms may make a thrust in to the Balkans, coincided with the summoning by Adolf Hitler of the Bulgarian premier and foreign minister to the Fuehrer's headquarters, apparently for the purpose of demanding more Bulgarian divisions to police the turbulent southeastern front.

It also coincided with the forthcoming meeting of the Turkish Foreign Minister Numan Menemencioglu with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Secretary of State Cordell Hull in Cairo.

These events—with their immense implications for the Bal-

By Mary Spargo

Thomas V. De Lorenzo, swarthy, husky leader of 18,000 unionized employes of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., yesterday crumpled under the savage questioning of the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee and revealed a mysterious string of aliases and false statements on records ranging from job applications to Selective Service statements and income tax reports.

Confident only when he spoke of his determination that union rights, which he termed "part of the American way of life we are fighting for," should not be abrogated, the Brooklyn-born union president was obviously startled and shaken when questioned on the basis of sheaves of records in the possession of the subcommittee.

Admittedly unfamiliar with congressional procedure, the witness in the inquiry into causes of production failure at Brewster failed to seize on the committee-announced right to refuse to answer questions which might incriminate him and time and again was trapped into surprising answers under the relentless questioning of Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana.

De Lorenzo, who legally changed his name from Harry Posner in New York State in 1940, told the committee he started his union career in 1939 when he was beginning his employment at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., as a riveter's helper, by joining both the AFL and the CIO.

He said a National Labor Relations Board election was in progress two months after he started with Brewster, and that on the advice of his wife, he joined both unions so that which ever won he'd be on the right side to keep his job. His wife preferred the AFL, he said, because she thought the CIO was run by Communists, but the CIO won the election.

He admitted later he was considered somewhat of a "renegade" member by the CIO and some officials in the UAW.

The man who has been termed everything in previous committee hearings from "a smart cookie" to "a dictator" and the master mind behind a "hellish labor contract"

Tom Harmon Missing Again; Unreported Since October 30

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 4 (AP).—Louis Harmon, father of Lieut. Tommy Harmon, Michigan's All-America halfback of 1939 and 1940, said tonight that the Army had informed him his son had been missing in action over China since October 30.

Harmon, a former bomber pilot, who crashed last April in South America, but found his way through the jungle to safety, was assigned to the 449th Fighter Squadron in China.

Although the famous football star was credited with bagging his first Zero August 26, his father said he did not mention this feat in letters home, but in a recent one had promised the family a Zero "for Christmas."

Louis L. Harmon, jr., brother of Tom, said the family's last letter from Harmon arrived last week and was dated October 13. He said Lieutenant Harmon indicated he expected to return to this country soon on leave.

The brother said relatives of the flier were hopeful he would again come through his adventure safely.

A third son of the Harmons, William, 28, is a first lieutenant and an instructor at Cochran Field, Macon, Ga. Louis, 30, is employed in Detroit. The missing flier was 24 years old in September.

Harmon last visited home in March, just before leaving the country for South America in the bomber "Old 98," which he then piloted. His college football number had been 98.

Emanuele of Italy Abdicates, Report

Nazis Broadcast From Vichy That King Has Yielded Throne

By Wes Gallagher

Somoewhere in Southern Italy, Nov. 4 (AP).—With his Italian reign in peril, King Vittorio Emanuele was reported today to have sought a truce with Count Carlo Sforza through which the anti-Fascist leader would be asked to form a government for Italy.

The King himself has made a long and difficult motor trip to Naples, heavily guarded but incognito, to meet Sforza and other leading opponents of the monarchy in what is believed to be a last desperate effort to extend his 43-year reign.

[The International News Service reported that the King received many wild huzzas and shouts of "Viva Il Re!" On the road to Naples, the King's party, consisting of two vehicles, jammed traffic at Avellino, where crowds thronged about the cars and cheered. The reception given the King in Vomero, a poor section of Naples, was amazingly enthusiastic.—Editor's note.]

The journey became necessary after Sforza, former Italian foreign minister, upon his arrival recently from exile in the United States, had refused to see the King in Brindisi.

An unimpeachable source said Sforza had snubbed the King at Brindisi with the excuse that he had arranged to depart immediately for Naples. There Sforza has been conferring with Benedetto Croce, noted philosopher, and leaders of Italy's six anti-Fascist political parties.

Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio made the same trip earlier this week and returned to tell the King that he was unable to get the opposition leaders to join in a cabinet so long as Vittorio Emanuele remained on the throne.

Speculation has been that the Democrats would demand the King's abdication in favor of his 6-year-old grandson, the Prince of Naples, unless the anti-Fascists chose to continue their insistence on a republic.

Sforza has taken th position that the King betrayed the nation in permitting the rise of fascism, and that only the withdrawal of the sovereign, as well as Crown Prince Umberto, will furnish the people with "striking evidence that a'l links of fascism have been broken."

London, Nov. 4 (INS).—The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio, in a broadcast reported by the London Daily Mirror, said today that King Vittoorio Emanuele had abdicated There was no confirmation of the report in London.

Blockade No Longer Needed, Hoover Says; Sees Victory Near

By Christine Sadler

All this country and Great Britain have to do to insure food getting to their starving Allies in Europe this winter is to change their blockade policy, which is no longer a major military weapon in the defeat of Germany, former President Hoover declared yesterday before a Foreign Relations subcommittee of the Senate.

"We have reached a stage now where we are confident of success, and even if there were a risk involved we could afford to take it," the food administrator of World War I said, maintaining that any military leaders who declare food ships should follow—not precede—victorious armies are "mistaken" and should have their views "overridden by the will of civilians."

With the exception of Poland and possibly France, occupied countries starving behind the blockade have ample funds to pay for the food they need, he said—listing the Netherlands, Norway and Belgium as not only able but eager to buy relief. The food need not even be bought in this country, but could be shipped from "southern hemisphere ports" in Swedish boats now standing idle, he said, pointing out that the Swedish and Swiss governments have said they were willing to undertake negotiations with Germany in regard to the relief feeding task and to supervise the program.

"It would be an enormous contribution morally if we could say tomorrow we are going to undertake this and put it on a purely humanitarian basis. I think it would give a great spiritual lift both to this country and to Great Britain," he declared.

Wearing his familiar high stiff collar and clad in a dark brown suit, Hoover had an attentive audience of more than 200, including many Congressmen not on the subcommittee.

Terming the forthcoming winter "very probably—I hope—the last of the war in Europe," he said it is likely to be the grimmest yet for Germany's captives. Asked by Senator Van Nuys (Democrat) of Indiana to amplify his remarks about the war's end, he replied: "I think we ought to be prepared to carry on the war during the whole year of 1944, irrespective of any miracle that might occur in the meantime."

He said he thought it would "mean a great deal" if the Senate should go on record as favoring the feeding of Europe now, and declared more than 40 million Americans have signified that desire. Their approval, he said, had been recorded with the Committee on Food for the Small Democracies.

"I do not think we should send food to a country unless Germany would agree not to take anything away from that country. I think this agreement could be secured. Germany has lived up to agreements for feeding prisoners and is going to have to live with the other countries of Europe for hundreds of years."

Clarence Pickett of Philadelphia, representing the American Friends Service Society, told the Senate subcommittee yesterday that recent reports indicated 20 per cent of the population of Belgium and 50 per cent of the population of Poland were destined to starve before next summer "unless aid is given."

Belgium has had an 800 per cent increase in tuberculosis among its population since 1940, he said.

Meantime, the State Department released the list of delegates who will attend the first meeting of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration here and in Atlantic City next week, and announced Dean Acheson would head the delegation from this country, with Francis B. Sayre as an alternate.

Advisers of this country at the meeting will be: Mrs. Eliza Conkey of Chicago; Harold Glasser of the monetary division of the Treasury; Roy Hendrickson, director of the Food Distribution Administration; Murray Latimer, chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board; Max Gardner, former governor of North Carolina; Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service; Leroy Stinebower, chief of the division of economic studies of the State Department; Herman Wells of the State Department, and Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward of the Social Security Board. John Vincent Carter, special assistant administrator of the Foreign Economic Administration, was named liaison officer.

The UNRRA agreement will be signed at the White House on Tuesday by representatives of 43 countries. Under Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, terming the meeting "of great importance," said President Roosevelt would address the delegates here on that day. Herbert Lehman, who until recently headed the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations for this country, is expected to be named head of the United Nations organization at the opening session in Atlantic City on Wednesday.

Rommel's Line Cut in Two

MUST FALL BACK—The British took Isernia, mountain road juncture, yesterday and Mark Clark on the west drove the Germans out of Mount Massico and Mount San Croce positions. Rommel's line was falling to pieces, and he was heavily engaged at its eastern end at San Salvo. He may have to fall back as much as 60 miles for a new stand. Arrows indicate the Allied punches against the enemy front (broken black line.)

6 miles west of Bopano, and Castelpetroso, in its drive on Isernia.

The sudden, dramatic smashing of the Massico line, which the enemy had for six busy weeks been transforming into what he hoped was an impregnable barrier, has enabled the Fifth Army to start a new drive with terrific momentum while the Germans still are falling back to their new defenses based on the Aurunci Mountain range.

The enemy, by contrast, was able to retire both to his first defense line along the Volturno River and then to the Massico line almost at his leisure.

The Aurunci line toward which the Nazis were fleeing under intense pressure today presents an unbroken front of mountainous terrain, pierced only by a main inland road toward Rome through a narrow gap at Mignano, 6 miles from Venafro. At present, American forces are only 5 miles from Mignano on the Via Casilina. A military commentator described the Americans' capture of Presenzano yesterday as "most important and a very fine performance."

Allied air forces enjoyed one of their busiest days of the war as they blazed away at German troop concentrations and gun positions along the entire front and raked supply lines in what headquarters called "countless missions."

Light and medium bombers exploded an enemy supply dump near Cupello, southwest of Vasto on the Adriatic, and ripped up railway yards, airdromes, roads and bridges over a wide area. Ten Nazi transport planes were destroyed on the ground at Avezzano. Two Allied planes were lost from all missions, against a single German craft shot down.

An official recapitulation of Tuesday's great daylight raid by the new 15th U. S. Army Air Force on a Messerschmitt assembly plant at Wiener Neustadt in Austria disclosed that 50 Nazi fighters were shot down instead of 30. American bomber losses were raised to 11 on the raid, which was believed to have put the Messerschmitt factory out of production for good.

Russians Claim Huge Nazi Losses

the Crimea, including Aleshki, just across the river from Kherson. At this point the Russians were only 120 miles from the old Rumanian border.

Seventy localities were taken in the Nevel sector, including Novokhovansk, 11 miles southwest of Nevel and 54 miles from the Latvian border. The Russians were headed for the railway city of Polotsk, and were ouflanking Vitebsk, 50 miles to the southeast.

With Soviet fighter planes already within easy range of the Rumanian, Polish and Baltic state borders, the special Moscow review gave these figures of German material losses since July 5:

	Destroyed	Captured	Total
Planes	9,900	289	10,189
Tanks	15,400	2,300	17,706
Guns	13,000	6,800	19,800
Armored cars	890	190	1,080
Mortars	13,000	6,180	19,180
Machine guns	50,000	24,460	74,460

In addition, the Russians destroyed or captured 60,500 trucks, 900 tractors, 2500 motorcycles, 13,000 ammunition wagons, 4000 freight cars, 300 locomotives, 2000 various supply dumps, 7,759,000 shells, 3,600,000 various mines and 300,000 air bombs and other booty.

Hurling the Germnas back as much as 270 miles, the Russians regained 135,000 square miles of territory, captured 38,000 localities of which 162 were important towns, "and liberated millions of Soviet people from Fascist slavery."

A midnight communique supplement said that General Tolbukhin's army killed 2000 more Germans yesterday in a methodical annihilation of German remnants clinging to the eastern banks of the lower Dnieper.

German broadcasts said the Russians already had crossed the Dnieper between Berislav and Nikopol in the sector north of Kherson, but declared the units reaching the west bank were wiped out.

It's All Right To Say There's 'Superbomber'

By the Associated Press

The Army's worst-kept secret, the new Boeing B-29 heavy bomber, finally emerged yesterday from under wraps.

It is all right now to say there is a B-29.

Gen. H. H. Arnold, Air Force chief, let the cat out of the bag in a speech last December 13.

Two weeks later a group of reporters got a complete description of the new superbomber during a visit to Wright Field, Ohio. They were not permitted to write anything about it, and didn't.

But in May, Executive Vice Chairman Charles E. Wilson of the War Production Board referred to scheduled production of the new superbomber; the Army weekly, Yank, mentioned it, and named it B-29, in July; Arnold wrote around the subject again in an article for the magazine Army Ordnance; an aviation magazine came out in print with it in August; Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker told all at a conference in India.

Now, at last, Arnold speaks right out in a formal statement:

"We now have a superbomber . . . it is the B-29 . . . evolved in secrecy during the past several years."

"This battleship of the air," Arnold said, "Is armored heavily with multiple-gun and power turrets. It can fly at very high altitudes.

"Its performance will not be discussed before it enters combat. However, the B-29 will have a range substantially greater than the maximum effective range of today's longest-range heavy bomber and it will carry quite sizable bomb loads for that distance.

"When it enters combat, today's long range will become medium range and today's heavy bombers will consequently become light heavies."

The final test of the B-29 is not now far distant, he said.

Churchill Pledges Restored Albania

kans—suggested that the time for important decisions by both the Allies and the Germans was at hand.

Churchill's disclosure that Allied liaison has been established with the Albanian patriots, followed similar action in establishing military missions with the Yugoslavs and Greeks.

The Yugoslav Partisans announced a few days ago that they had been joined by the Albanians in border fighting in Montenegro.

That the Germans have their hands full and are in need of Bulgarian divisions was apparent from the communique of Josip Broz (Drug Tito), who declared his redstarred Partisans had seized Priboj on the Lim River, 60 miles southeast of Sarajevo.

The communique said Partisan units also were holding firmly to Varazdin near the Hungarian border, nearby Ludpreg, Toplice Novi Marof and Zlatar, all in the area between Zagreb and the Hungarian border and in the midst of a network of railways and roads connecting Budapest with northern Italy.

Moreover, Croat Partisans "are operating successfully over the Hungarian frontier" in the province of Medjmurye and have destroyed the Zagreb-Varazdin-Toplice railway at several points, the communique declared.

Invasion Feared

Ankara, Nov. 4 (AP).—Advices from Bucharest today said that many well-to-do Rumanians, alarmed by the rapid advance of the Red army in southern Russia, are hastening to obtain Turkish visas in order to be able to get out of the country should a Soviet invasion appear likely.

U. S. Sets Up Military Unit In Moscow

By Henry C. Cassidy

Moscow, Nov. 4 (AP).—U. S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman announced today the make-up of a United States militray mission to Moscow estbalished to facilitate cooperation among American, Russian and British armed forces "as the war approaches its inevitable climax."

"In the past," he said at a press conference, "military collaboration in Moscow between the three countries has been difficult because there has been no one in Moscow who could act as the direct representative of the United States' chief of staff. To correct this, arrangements have been made to provide for the closest possible relationship between the military mission and military and naval authorities in Washington.

Headed by General Deane

The mission is headed by Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, former secretary to the combined chiefs of staff in Washington, who served as secretary to the general staff before the war. He came to Moscow with U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Brig. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg of the Air Forces heads the Army division, and Commodore C. E. Olsen, former member of Admiral Ernest J. King's planning and operations section, heads the Navy division.

To Handle Lend-Lease

Brig. Gen. S. P. Spalding is charged with the supply division, handling lend-lease operations and shipping. Spadling previously served on the munitions assignment board in Washington.

Harriman announced two other additions to the staff of the Moscow Embassy. Charles E. Bohlen, assistant chief of the European division of the State Department, who came with Hull as a Russian expert, remained as First Secretary of the embassy. Samuel Spewack, former foreign correspondent for the New York World and playwright, was appointed attache to promote exchanges of information.

10 Jap Ships Sunk, 3 Hit by U. S. Subs

Japs Resorting To Poison Gas, Chinese Declare

Chungking, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Chinese high command said tonight that Japanese poison gas squads inflicted "considerable casualties" on Chinese soldiers battling a new seven-column enemy drive in the Rice Bowl area of the middle Yangtze River.

American Mitchell bombers yesterday attacked three Japanese springboard bases at Owchihkow, Hwajung and Shihshow in that area.

One Japanese column attacking toward Kungan, west of Tungting Lake below the Yangtze, resorted to gas after colliding with a Chinese unit and suffering severe losses, the high command said. The action occurred near Nanhsien, 70 miles south of Shasi on the Yangtze.

The United States and Britain have warned they would retaliate against any Axis power using poison gas.

Total of Nipponese Craft Knocked Out Now Set at 487

Sinking of 10 Japanese merchantmen and damaging of three others by American submarines was reported by the Navy today, bringing to 487 the number of Japanese ships sunk, probably sunk or damaged by undersea craft.

The Navy's communique also reported the sinking of a 1000-ton freighter by a Navy reconnaissance plane off Ocean Island, 750 miles northeast of Guadalcanal.

Among the ships sunk, all of them in use in supplying Japanese bases, were six freighters, a large cargo transport and two tankers. The damaged vessels included two more freighters and a tanker.

The area in which the submarines operated was not disclosed, but previous Navy reports have said submarines were operating off the coast of the Japanese mainland.

The reconnaissance plane, attacked and sank the enemy freighter 30 miles southwest of Ocean Island, which is about 130 miles east of Nauru. The plane was damaged, presumably by antiaircraft fire, and a number of her crew were wounded.

Senate Prepares For Postwar Vote

foe of the League of Nations, upset another Connally proposal that the Senate remain in session today until the final vote is taken.

Leaders predicted confidently that the revised resolution, incorporating part of the Moscow agreement and declaring unequivocally for the formation of a general international organization after the war to maintain peace and security, will be approved without further significant change. They could count only six to eight votes against it.

Among the "noes," either voting on paired against the resolution, were expected to be Senators Hiram Johnson, Wheeler, Langer, La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, Shipstead (Republican) of Minnesota and Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina.

Supporters of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill amendment for airtight postwar commitments, now satisfied that the resolution is as strong as it can be made, deserted the debate yesterday for the first time in nine days.

They said the Connally commitment for "international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace," implemented by the peace policy of the Moscow agreement, should assure formation of a league, a world court, and any military authority needed to back up decisions.

Danaher's amendment restating Atlantic Charter terms ironically enough drew its strongest support from Senators opposing any resolution or favoring a weak resolution. Only one of the group which has fought for a specific postwar pronouncement — Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan — voted for it. Voting "aye" among others were such out-and-out Nationalists as Wheeler, Nye, Hi Johnson, Langer and Reynolds.

Among the day's many speeches was an attack by Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican) of Ohio on Secretary of State Cordell Hull's Moscow interview criticizing "isolationists" of both parties who opposed America's entry into the war. Taft said he thought it "unfortunate that the Secretary of State should take the position the people who did that were wrong."

The Ohio Republican also opposed drastic partitioning of Germany after the war, warning that another world war would result.

Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, who like Taft is expected to support the revised resolution, told the Senate he had "no particular dislike" for the term "isolationist" when he can define the term. He charged the President was willing to be known as an isolationist in his August 14, 1936, Chautauqua speech, when he said: "We are not isolationists except in so far as we seek to isolate ourselves completely from war."

In New York, meanwhile, Wendell L. Willkie called for Senate approval of the Connally resolution, with point four of the Moscow agreement, as a reflection of "the overwhelming sentiment of the American people."

Said Willkie: "The important point at the moment is that the world should know at once that our treaty-ratifying body — the United States Senate—approves the basic principles involved in the Moscow agreement."

Destruction Floats Down Upon Japs at Rabaul

PARACHUTES OF PERDITION—Yank parachute bombs dropped in the October 12 raid on Rabaul, New Britain, drift toward great Jap bombers in their revetments and toward runways and buildings. Parachute bombs are used in low flying attacks to prevent destruction of the bombing craft by too-immediate explosions

THE SHOE'S ON THE OTHER FOOT—And it pinches. At Pearl Harbor and Manila, the Japs usually beat us to it, sometimes by minutes. Now it's the other way round. At Rabaul, New Britain, the enemy massed great forces for a blow at the Americans. Before they could move, MacArthur's fliers struck. Last Tuesday, his planes went in and left this wreckage of ships in the harbor. Now, they'll strike no blow anywhere

Jap Cruiser and 4 Destroyers Revealed Sunk in Battle

Four other small coastal vessels were sunk and 11 other craft damaged.

At headquarters of Admiral Halsey, it was considered likely that the warships bombed at Rabaul were survivors of the naval battle nine hours earlier.

Halsey's headquarters reported new progress at Empress Augusta Bay. There the Japanese have been routed from small Puruata Island near the landing beach and from strong positions at Cape Torokfo.

The naval battle was fought in darkness and during rain squalls, and a spokesman at Admiral William F. Halsey's South Pacific headquarters reported that while for once the enemy lacked the superiority they've had in past engagements, they still probably had greater fire power."

After the Japanese task force broke off the fight, scattering in three groups toward Rabaul, the Allied units regrouped for the expected enemy air attacks which came after dawn.

Allies Admit "Damage"

Although no Allied ship losses occurred, "damage and casualties were sustained," headquarters said.

The Americans in the naval battle maneuvered brilliantly, dividing the Jap task force and bringing the vessels under direct fire.

Today's communique reported yet another strike at Rabaul, the eighth since October 12. Obviously in small force, Mitchells on night patrol started fires at the Tobera airdrome, one of five such fields at Rabaul. Near there an 8000 ton merchantman was bombed and sunk off Cape Pomas to add to the approximately 100,000 tons of shipping sunk or damaged at Rabaul Tuesday.

The Japanese shipping concentrations at Rabaul, 260 miles northwest of the Bougainville beachhead, and the enemy's naval and air thrusts near Empress Augusta offered proof that Japan senses the peril of her position in the Solomons and intends to try to do something about it.

The latest reports on the outcome of the naval battle still were preliminary, meaning even greater enemy losses may have occurred.

It was the first large-scale naval battle reported during the current Pacific campaign.

Near Kavieng, New Ireland, another enemy base of reinforcement and supply in resisting the Allied march up the Solomons, a patrolling Liberator spotted a convoy of three destroyers and three large vessels at dawn Wednesday. The Liberator scored a bomb hit on a transport.

The announcement of victory on Treasury referred to the larger, 8-mile-long, heavily wooded Mono. There has been no recent report on nearby Stirling, a mere pinpoint of an island where presumably enemy resistance was negligible.

The naval engagement at the entrance to Empress Augusta Bay was fought in a heavy rainstorm hours before dawn Tuesday.

Previous reconnaissance had spotted 12 enemy vessels coming down from the northwest, the unidentified task force commander told war correspondents at Admiral William F. Halsey's headquarters.

It was a "helluva black night," the American commander said, and the enemy replied immediately and sent up planes which dropped flares to silhouette the U. S. ships. In the eerie light of these flares and bursting star shells the battle was fought out for more than an hour. The action moved 10 miles westward as the Japs gradually withdrew

Port Elizabeth, Union of South Africa, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Swedish liner Gripsholm, carrying 1500 citizens of the Americas who are being repatriated after nearly two years' internment in the Far East, sailed tonight for New York via Rio de Janeiro. The ship had been in port here two days. She is due in Rio de Janeiro about November 14.

Fewer Draft Delinquents Under Scrutiny

Draft delinquents under FBI investigation in the District were reported last night to be decreasing in number. During October 449 cases here were under scrutiny. This is a decrease of 56 from the number under investigation in September.

In addition to the 449 cases under FBI investigation local boards reported 37 new cases on November 1 which had not been turned over for legal action.

No large increase in the cases here is expected to result from the order of Selective Service for delinquent registrants between 18 and 35 to report at once to their draft boards. The District record for delinquents is said to be considerably lower than that from other sections of the country.

This is attributed by FBI to the fact local boards have kept in closer touch with registrants and prevented many cases of delinquency through carelessness or ignorance of the regulations.

Rumored Halt in Tin Salvage Denied

Reports that there is enough tin in the United States to justify halting the tin-can salvage campaign were denied yesterday by two War Production Board spokesmen, both of whom said there was less than a two-year supply of the critically needed metal on hand.

The American stockpile, it was said, totals approximately 100,000 tons. Of this, one of the new superaircraft carriers, alone, will require 100 tons, an official said.

To maintain the supply, the United States purchases approximately 10,000 to 20,000 tons from Bolivia; 10,000 to 15,000 tons from the Belgian Congo and small amounts from South Africa, Mexico and China, it was said.

WPB officials pointed out that although America was the greatest user of tin among the United Nations she produces practically none and that the tin-can salvage program, one of the best sources of secondary tin, would have to be continued to maintain the dwindling stockpile.

The salvage program, it was said, now averages 20,000 tons of tin cans a month. This represents approximately 200 million cans collected from householders who are cooperating in the drive.

Meanwhile, the Japs are sitting on 70 per cent of the world's supply of tin in Malaya and the Dutch East Indies and the United Nations are having to get along on 30 per cent.

Nine-tenths of America's prewar consumption of tin was supplied from Singapore. A program, started by the Reconstruction Finance Corp. in June, 1940, to create a large reserve of the white metal, did not come soon enough. After Singapore's fall, it was necessary to begin to recapture the tin circulating in this country, officials said.

One can, it was said, requires one year from the time it is filled at a packing plant to reach the kitchen of an American home.

Since the start of the drive, the average number of cans collected monthly has increased 50 million. Before Pearl Harbor, 100,000 tons of tin was only one year's supply.

Milk Producers Ask Price Hike, Fight Subsidy

In an attack on President Roosevelt's food subsidy policy, organized milk producers yesterday asked Congress to order a $622,000,000-a-year increase in the prices of milk and dairy products as a substitute for Government payments to dairy farmers and butter processors.

This increase, proposed in a bill submitted by Senators Eastland (Democrat) of Mississippi, and McClellan (Democrat) of Arkansas, on behalf of leading producer cooperatives, would raise the retail price of milk about a cent per quart and butter about 6 cents a pound.

Less in Long Run

"In the long run, it will cost less for consumers to pay this bill now than to pass it on to future generations," declared Charles W. Holman, secretary of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, who said the present Government subsidy on these products costs about 500 million dollars annually, "not counting the interest charges."

Eastland said he and other foes of the subsidy were ready to make the milk price bill a test of congressional sentiment on the subject.

"The people are ready and willing to pay higher prices in perference to subsidies," he told the Senate Agriculture Committee. "Subsidies are wholly inadequate to keep up dairy production and I venture to say that if this bill isn't passed we're to have hungry babies and hungry children."

Holman contended passage of the bill would halt declining milk production and encourage dairymen to stay in business.

Liquidating Herds

He reported to the Senate committee that dairy farmers "caught by a squeeze between rapidly rising production costs and rigid price controls for milk" are liquidating dairy cows at such a rate that in some areas the beef markets for such animals have broken under the strain.

Prices received for these cows show they are no longer a good investment, witnesses said, and sometimes are 40 per cent below those of a few months ago.

Meantime, the House Agriculture Committee heard S. R. Smith, deputy director of food distribution for the War Food Administration, declare the WFA proposal for ceiling prices on citrus fruit on a per pound basis at the retail level would discourage black market operations, reduce the cost to consumers at least 10 per cent and still give growers at least parity for their product.

Proposal Before Vinson

He said the proposal was now before Economic Stabilization Director Vinson for consideration.

The WFA has no plans, he said, for purchasing and redistributing the citrus crop nor is any subsidy involved in cutting back the retail prices. Representative Kleburg (Democrat) of Texas said Jean Carroll, head of the food section of OPA, would be called to explain charges of the citrus industry that Government purchase of 80 million boxes of citrus foods is contemplated.

Representative Voorhis (Democrat) of California declared OPA regulations on citrus prices provide markups much above normal for handlers of the crop.

No More Ration Books 1 and 2 to Be Issued

No more copies of War Ration Books One and Two are to be issued "for any purpose whatever," the OPA yesterday informed local war price and rationing boards.

If owners have coupon in Book One and blue stamps "X," "Y" and "Z" in Book Two "these stamps should be safeguarded against loss" for they will not be replaced, OPA declared.

There's no need to be in a rush to use coupon 18 for shoes, however, for 30 days' notice will be given before its expiration date, OPA said.

Economy-Minded House Group Cuts Deficiency Budget 82%

By the Associated Press

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday expressed concern that the war's end may find a huge surplus of war materials in submitting a $215,368,444 deficiency appropriation bill—just 18 per cent of the $1,196,428,749 asked by twoscore Government agencies.

"Unless Congress makes some definite provision in the near future," the committee told the House, "there is likely to be a recurrence of the situation of World War I, where large surpluses were in the hands of individual agencies for disposal, with no coordination of the efforts of all of them as a single problem."

OWI Fund Approved

The economy-minded committee achieved most of the cut in requested appropriations by denying the Navy 750 million dollars it had asked for its stock fund capital. This fund is used for purchases of all kinds of noncombatant materials consumed by the Navy. The committee said that if the money is needed it should be transferred from previous appropriations for naval ordnance.

Although many in Congress have been sharply critical of the Office of War Information, a five million dollar appropriation—the amount asked — was approved for that agency. Testimony at closed hearings, made public by the committee, disclosed that military chiefs highly praised OWI's war work.

An OWI propaganda broadcast was credited with influencing Italian fleet commanders to turn over their ships to the Allies, and 80 per cent of German and Italian soldiers surrendering in Sicily were reported to have said they were influenced by OWI propaganda leaflets and broadcasts.

A minority report signed by Republican Representative Taber of New York, Wigglesworth of Massachusetts, Ditter of Pennsylvania, and Lambertson of Kansas, objected to giving additional funds to the OWI on the ground that agency "already has plenty of money for the time being if properly used."

Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, described the committee's reduction of requests as a "bone-removing operations" and declared it "reflects the sentiment of the country favoring curtailment of Federal expenditures to the irreducible minimum."

Reductions Listed

In performing this operation, the committee chopped out:

Six million five hundred thousand dollars asked by the Farm Security Administration for salaries and expenses, and also refused the agency's request for authority to borrow 37 million dollars for operating loans to farmers.

Five million seven hundred and seven thousand five hundred dollars asked by the War Manpower Commission, $3,545,000 by the Federal Security Agency, $3,963,150 by the Office of Education, $150,000,000 by War Housing, $3,340,175 by the Interior Department, and $1,633,500 by the Treasury Department.

Specific projects on which the committee turned thumbs down included $7,500,00 for emergency guayule rubber, $3,900,000 for teacher training, $2,800,000 for water conservation, $20,000 for study of soybean diseases, $15,000 for experiments to adapt the Army's jeep to farm uses and $25,000 for experiments to increase the yield of turpentine.

The committee said the House itself would have to tighten its belt and eliminated a $2500 item for House contingency expenses. However, it added $20,000 to the congressional appropriation for "beneficiaries of deceased members." It long has been the custom to pay the equivalent of a year's salary, $10,000, to beneficiaries of legislators who died in office.

Russian Delegation to Study Bank Plan Here

Russia has agreed to send a delegation to Washington to discuss plans for an international currency stabilization fund and a world-wide reconstruction and rehabilitation bank, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday.

The Soviet participated only as an observer in the summer-long discussions on stabilization. The world bank project was outlined only shortly before the Treasury Secretary left on his battle front tour.

WLB Votes Today on Coal Pact; Approval Deemed Probable

were said to be inclined to go along with the agreement as a group, but some dissent from the public group was regarded as likely.

The agreement gave all soft coal miners a $1.50 a day wage increase instead of the $1.12½ previously approved by WLB for Illinois mines. The extra 37½ cents was secured by reducing the present coal mine lunch period from 30 minutes to 15 minutes to add 15 minutes more work a day, to be paid for at time and a half rates.

Relatively Few Return

The generally unsettled nature of the coal situation was underlined by reports that only a comparative handful returned to work yesterday in response to Lewis' back to work order.

UMW officials explained that some local unions did not receive the order in time; in other cases it was decided to call local meetings to discuss the question. Customarily, miners hesitate to go back to work near the end of a work week, particularly since they cannot receive time and a half pay for work on Saturday unless they have worked the preceding five days.

The mine union is confident that full production will be resumed by Monday.

Price Increase Required

Ickes told a press conference that execution of the agreement would require an increase in the price of coal—a question which would have to go before the Office of Price Administration for decision.

The Government operator of the mines declined to answer questions on technical details of the new agreement, stating, "I am not an adding machine." He emphasized, however, that the pact was perfectly satisfactory to both the United Mine Workers and the Department of Interior.

"The clouds have lifted," Ickes said. "Now we can go ahead and mine coal."

Asked if the agreement affected the WLB's "Little Steel" wage formula, he answered: "Let's get down to fundamentals. We are behind 40 million tons in the production of coal. It is essential to dig more coal. If I can get extra work time, meaning more production, it would be justified, regardless of the effect on wages. If I thought the miners would be physically able to work 9 or 10 hours a day, I would talk to them about it."

Girl Missing Since Sunday Returns Safely to N. Y. Home

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Margaret Leighton Moore, 14, who disappeared from Central Park last Sunday afternoon, returned to her Park Avenue home today and police said she told them she had gone to Columbus, Ohio, with a sailor, rejected his advances and protested against his representing himself as her husband.

The Moore family physician, Dr. Richard Pierson, pronounced her in excellent physical condition and unharmed. Miss Moore is the daughter of Maj. David Dodge Moore, Army Medical Corps, and Mrs. Moore.

After Miss Moore disappeared last Sunday, police broadcast an alarm for the arrest of a sailor, Edward J. Moore, 20, on a charge of abduction. They said he was listed as being absent from naval duty without leave.

Police said they still were were searching for the sailor.

At Columbus, Genevieve Santo, waitress in a hotel restaurant, said a girl she identified as Miss Moore came in for breakfast Tuesday morning, "greatly disturbed about something."

"She told me she was married Monday and that her husband wouldn't speak to her," Miss Santo said. "She said that she had known him five days before they were married. I told her to go back to her room and not worry about it, that it was just a spat and would soon blow over.

"Then she told me she had only 70 cents and that her husband had left the hotel and she didn't know where he was. She said she was from New York. She went to her room and came back pretty soon. Evidently her husband had returned because when she came back she was crying and said 'he still won't speak to me.'

"I told her, 'don't let it get you down, honey.'"

First Lady Says Soldiers Yelled 'Hi, Baby!' at Her

New York, Nov. 4 (INS).—When a bunch of soldiers shouted "Hi, Baby!" at Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the President's wife was a bit taken aback. But she understood the sentiment.

The First Lady revealed in a radio address today that the incident occurred when she visited Guadalcanal in the Solomons on her recent tour of the Pacific.

Soldiers on the island hadn't seen a woman in months and when, from a distance, a truckload of servicemen spotted Mrs. Roosevelt in her Red Cross uniform, she wasn't the First Lady, wife of their Commander in Chief. She was just someone in a skirt.

"After all," Mrs. Roosevelt said, "I am rather middle-aged. I believe all they saw was a woman."

Salvation Army Head Dies in Newport News

Newport News, Va., Nov. 4 (AP).—Adjutant Albert Mattson, 64, officer in charge of the Salvation Army headquarters here, died unexpectedly of a heart attack today at his home.

He became associated with the Salvation Army in 1921, serving in Harrisonburg, Richmond, Greenville, S. C.; Florence, S. C.; Annapolis, Md., and coming here in 1939 from his station in suffolk.

De Marigny, on Stand, Denies He Killed Oakes

party at his home July 7, he related, and he drove two guests to their homes near Westbourne about 1 a. m.

"I drove back to the house," he continued.

"Straight home?" Higgs asked.

"Yes, straight home."

Awakened in Night

He undressed and went to bed, he said, being awakened once by the noise of a fight between his dog and the cat "Grisou," owned by the Marquis George de Visdelou, who was living also at the Victoria st. cottage. He said he asked his friend to take the cat out of his room.

De Marigny said he arose early the next morning and went to his chicken farm. He did not learn of Sir Harry's death, he added, until he was hailed on a downtown street by Banker John H. Anderson, who broke the news.

"Are you kidding?" He said he asked Anderson in disbelief.

De Marigny told of driving to Westbourne with Anderson. They stopped at the nearby cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Newell Kelly, and talked about the death.

The accused man said he went alone to Westbourne, where he learned from the conversation that his father-in-law had been struck on the head and set afire. Although the defense has made much of his 15-minute absence from the Kelly cottage, De Marigny made no attempt to claim that he entered the death room at this time. The Crown has based its case largely on a fingerprint reported found on a bedscreen in the room, and defense attorneys through cross-examination has suggested that De Marigny might have touched the screen after the body was discovered.

De Marigny Ends Story

At the end of the day De Marigny had finshed laying his story before an attentive jury. Tomorrow he will brave a cross examination, a risk he decided to take by offering sworn testimony instead of making a statement, not under oath, from the prisoner's dock.

His faithful 19-year-old wife paid a visit to him at the prison before the session to help prepare him for this fight for life.

While Nancy was in a West Palm Beach hospital for the pregnancy operation, De Marigny testified, he entered a room of her suite planning to undergo a tonsillectomy.

"I received a call from Sir Harry telling me to get the hell out of that room or he'd come kick me out," the witness said.

He told of a disagreement with Dr. William Y. Sayad over a request that Nancy's parents be kept out of her room, and said he warned the physician "if Sir Harry insisted upon coming in and disturbing my wife I would have to knock him out of the room." He denied, however, that he threatened to "crack Sir Harry's head," as Dr. Sayad had testified he did.

Soon on Outs Again

His relations with Sir Harry improved for a while, De Marigny said, and the millionaire offered him a tract of farming land which he declined because of its isolated location. But soon they were on the outs again and the climax came when Sir Harry came to the De Marigny home at 4 a. m., threatened to "kick down the front door" and made his son, now Sir Sidney, leave with him.

Newell Kelly, Sir Harry's Nassau business manager, quoted De Marigny yesterday as threatening to kick his father-in-law, but the defendant said today he was "joking."

In describing the dinner party at his home July 7, De Marigny made his effort to combat Crown testimony that there were singed hairs on his hands and arms. He told of lighting hurricane lamps, and burning both hands in doing so "because I am ambidextrous."

He set the stage for a possible contest of Crown testimony that he appeared wild-eyed and excited at the police station the morning of July 8. He did go to the station, he said, and talked to a police officer. While there, he said, he saw Donald McKinney, who is on the list of defense witnesses.

De Marigny said he was upset by the news of Sir Harry's death and asked for a glass of water when he returned to the Kelly cottage after his brief visit to Westbourne. Mrs. Kelly has said that he acted "theatrical."

Tells of Examination

Pulling at his black and white striped tie, which went with a bluish-greenish lightweight suit, De Marigny told of the examination of his hands and arms by the Miami police captains E. W. Melchen and James O. Barker. They said they found burned hairs, he related, but did not show them to him. Later, he continued, he was questioned again by Melchen.

"Melchen pointed his finger at me and asked: 'Are you sure you didn't come to Westbourne last night?'" De Marigny said. "Before I could answer he said, 'You came here to talk with him and had an argument and hit him.'

"I told him if I wanted to see Sir Harry I would do so in the daytime and not the middle of the night."

De Marigny, in describing the questioning at Westbourne, said Melchen sat to the left of him and on a table next to him was a tray of glasses and pitcher of water.

"He asked me to pour him a glass of water, which I did and one for myself," the witness related. "Captain Barker looked in the door and asked 'is everything okay?' Melchen replied 'yes.'"

Defense counsel previously suggested that Melchen and Barker faked a fingerprint of De Marigny, obtaining one after the crime, and that the one offered in evidence did not come from the bedscreen in Sir Harry's room as the crown contends. The fingerprint is not now on the screen, because Barker testified that he lifted it with scotch tape.

De Marigny said he invited to dinner Harold G. Christie, who was a house guest at Sir Harry's estate the night of the slaying and who told of finding the body the next morning when he went to summon Oakes for breakfast.

Christie did not accept the telephoned invitation, De Marigny added.

The witness said he paid the last installment due on the chicken farm in Higgs' office July 7, later lunched at home, then went racing in his Star Class sailboat, Concubine. He is well known as a yachtsman.

He went home and dressed for dinner.

"What did you wear?" inquired Higgs.

"I wore those clothes," and De Marigny pointed to clothing which has been introduced in evidence. Crown witnesses have testified that he was unable to produce the shirt he told of wearing.

"I never wear socks."

"What kind of tie did you wear?"

"It is impossible to tell, I have so many ties."

Raymond C. Schindler, private detective employed by the defense, at this point dumped 33 flashy ties on the counsel table.

Higgs asked about Police Lieut. John Douglas' testimony that De Marigny had said: "Sir Harry, the old ——, he should have been killed anyway."

De Marigny denied making the statement and attributed it, instead, to Douglas.

Strikes May Spread Into a General Argentine Revolt

Montevideo, Uruguay, Nov. 4 (AP). Strikes which paralyzed the Argentine packing plants of Armour and Swift at La Plata for 10 days were reported spreading today to other establishments in Buenos Aires and Avellaneda.

Travelers from the Argentine said the original strikes of the meat packers were declared for purely labor questions but apparently are linked to a general labor resistance to the Ramirez government. They expressed belief that a general strike might develop.

Students of La Plata, Cordoba and Santa Fe Universities were declared making good their promises to boycott examinations in protest of the discharge of professors signing a manifesto calling on President Ramirez to honor Argentine commitments.

corpus matter and to agree to any findings of the higher court. The case is to be carried up to that court within the next few days and the court will be petitioned for an early review.

The Baby Broker bill has been in the Senate for several months, with periodic evidences of its need coming up in the local courts. This bill would require the licensing of all persons who engage in procuring adoptions of children and put them under the rigid control of the Government which would see that only those qualified may engage in the practice.

Pleads Not Guilty

Miss Catherine Samarzo, 22, a waitress of 119 C st. se., pleaded not guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to assault in attempting to get back the illegitimate child witnesses said she once had agreed to give away.

Judge Walter J. Casey set jury trial for November 17 and released Miss Samarzo under $300 bond.

The warrant, sworn out by Mrs. Joseph McGuire of 229 Tenth st. se., charged that Miss Samarzo kicked Mrs. Naomi Grimara, an expectant mother, who was caring for Miss Samarzo's child.

Conspiracy Charge

The child, now in the hands of the Board of Public Welfare, was born two months ago. In September Miss Samarzo and Mrs. McGuire were charged with conspiring to defraud the Government by permitting Miss Samarzo to use Mrs. McGuire's name for maternal care at Providence Hospital, under the pretense that the father was a naval petty officer.

During a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, Miss Samarzo denied knowingly giving the child over to Mrs. McGuire who had a written agreement in her possession relinquishing the child to her. That case is now before the grand jury.

Mrs. Grimara last night was at Gallinger Hospital. She is near childbirth.

vision, largest of all, contributing $1,974,601, or 83 per cent of quota of $2,400,000.

Dubbed "Glamour Girl"

Called the "Glamour Girl" of the 1943-44 campaign by Chairman Jennings, was Mrs. Charles G. Goldsmith of Westchester Apartments, 39th st. and Cathdral av., nw, who singlehandedly during the five elapsed weeks of the fund drive has brought in more than $108,000.

Paid high personal tribute also was Frederick P. H. Siddons, Washington banker and chairman of the national accounts section of the business and finance division, who alone exacted pledges and cash in excess of $75,000.

Fairfax County, with a quota of $31,500 was leading all four counties in the metropolitan area with a subscription of $19,331, 61 per cent of goal, with Prince Georges County trailing with $19,080, or 58 per cent of a quota of $32,626.

Montgomery County was third with a total to date pledge of $50,375 against its drive objective of $87,374; Arlington County last with but 35 per cent of its goal of $48,500 realized in $17,068 raised up to now.

Low-salaried Congressional Library workers, averaging under $1200 earnings annually, were disclosed as the "loyalists" of the campaign, their average contribution of $12 each, extolled by speakers, "as contributions out of proportion to their earnings."

Confident that the meeting of November 12 would be the final one of the 1943-44 campaign, Chairman Jennings urged "a peak effort by all divisions and their workers that every business place in Washington and every individual shall have made their just and necessary pledges to support this most imperative of causes."

Today thousands of drive volunteers will take the field, going back to unreporting business houses, exacting definite pledges from citizens who requested "call backs" and in general "fine-combing" the District to bring all within the contributing fold.

Classmates to Honor Benjamin Washington

Benjamin Washington of 936 S st. nw., who recently retired after nearly 50 years' service as teacher in the Washington schools, will be honored at a dinner by former classmates, it was announced last night. The dinner will be held in the cafeteria of the Terrill Junior High School, M st., between 1st st. and New Jersey ave. nw., at a date to be announced, probably about November 15.

William Nixon, 936 S st. nw., who is in charge, said members of the classes of 1893-'94-'95 and '96 of the old M St. High School, from which Washington was graduated, will attend.

Senate Group Hears About Paint Cartel

By the Associated Press

Wendell Berge, Assistant Attorney General, testified yesterday that domestic monopolies and an international cartel have kept a high grade of paint from coming into general use by the common people. He appeared before a Senate subcommittee studying war mobilization.

Berge said titanium, which he described as the most valuable and useful of all white pigments, has been priced exorbitantly and its use restricted because of the monopolistic control exercised over it by a world-wide cartel.

Members of the cartel, he said, include I. G. Farbenindustrie, the German chemical trust, and other foreign companies, while American members are the National Lead Co. I. E. duPont de Nemours, & Co., and Titan Co., Inc. Berge said the three companies were indicted under the antitrust statutes by a grand jury in the Southern District of New York June 28.

Berge said American members of the cartel are placed in a position where they have felt obliged to help the Japanese evade the British embargo, and have seen fit to aid I. G. Farben in attempting to prevent seizure of German-owned patents by the American Alien Property Custodian by the execution of spurious patent assignments.

General Chemical Case

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 4 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today indicted the General Chemical Co. of New York, three other chemical manufacturing concerns and seven individuals on charges of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act by allegedly conspiring to monopolize the manufacture and sale of laboratory chemicals in the United States, and by allegedly conspiring to eliminate competition.

Besides General Chemical Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of the Allied Chemical & Dye Corp., the indictment named:

Leonard F. Eiklor of New York, director of fine chemicals for General Chemical;

Merck & Co., Inc., of Rahway, N. J., and three of its officers, James J. Kerrigan of Summit, N. J., vice-president; Joseph K. L. Snyder of Rahway, general sales director, and John W. Wilson of Rahway, chief of its price control department;

The J. T. Baker Chemical Co. of Phillipsburg, N. J., and its president, Herbert H. Garis of Easton, Pa., and its vice president, Ralph A. Clark, also of Easton.

Mallinckrodt Chemical Works of St. Louis, Mo., and the chief of Mallinckrodt's laboratory and chemicals division, Arnold D. Alt, of St. Louis.

DESTROYER-ESCORT BUILT IN 25 DAYS

NEW WORLD'S RECORD IN SHIP CONSTRUCTION

Beats World War I Destroyer Time of 45½ Days—Bethlehem Set Both Marks

Has Large Gun-Power for Both Offensive and Defensive Service; Equipped for Surface, Depth Bomb and Anti-Aircraft Combat

Beating all prior records, the destroyer-escort Reynolds was completed and delivered Nov. 3 to the U. S. Navy, by the Bethlehem-Hingham Shipyard just 25 days after keel laying.

The Reynolds is a hard-hitting, fighting unit with great fire-power and speed, a bigger, more powerful ship than the destroyer Reid, which held the previous production record of being built in 45½ days, during World War I. Bethlehem built both ships.

The Reynolds has terrific battle armament for surface, depth bomb, or anti-aircraft combat. Her main battery has guns mounted in three turrets which can revolve in a complete circle to follow a target, and can be fired by a trained crew with amazing accuracy and rapidity. Aft is a 40-mm. Bofors gun, each barrel capable of firing 120 rounds of 2-pound projectiles per minute. She has numerous 20-mm. Oerlikon machine guns with a potential fire-power of nearly 400 shells every 60 seconds. Also, along port and starboard rails aft of amidships are a flock of K-guns which can toss out the famous 300-pound "ash cans" which make it unhealthy for any submarine within hundreds of yards.

Destroyer-escort designed by U. S. Navy has wide range of fire-power and fast speed. DE Reynolds was built by Bethlehem-Hingham Shipyard in record time of 25 days.

The Reynolds is, in fact, one of those powerful, swift, sea-panthers designed by the Navy to drive the Nazi subs from the Atlantic and protect American convoys. She can deliver a terrific curtain of fire effective at 2500 yards against air or surface targets. Like some of her sister ships, she is one of Uncle Sam's contributions to the British fleet.

The first group of ships in the destroyer-escort class were built in 302 days.

The next group in this class were built in 206 days.

Now the Reynolds has set the mark of 25 days.

And she is but one of hundreds of warships steaming out of the shipyards of America to speed the day of Victory.

Vinson Demands More Taxes To Forestall Inflation Orgy

Taking to task the American people who are spending "astronomical sums" on luxuries and merrymaking, Fred M. Vinson, director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, last night recommended additional taxation to prevent an "orgy of inflation."

Judge Vinson spoke at a meeting of the Investment Bankers Association of America at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City.

Vinson declared that "love of ease, political cowardice and personal ambition" threaten betrayal of our fighting men overseas.

Fears Financial Crash

To prevent runaway inflation and financial disaster, Vinson said a minimum of $10,500,000,000 in new taxes—the amount sought by the Administration and trimmed to less than $3,000,000,000 by Congress—is necessary.

Vinson said more income taxes, to be raised by lowering present personal and dependency allowances and increase normal and surtax rates, were the most satisfactory method of taxation, based on the "tried and true principle of ability to pay."

Vinson said men and women who formerly were able to get work for only two or three days a week and who are now working long hours of overtime are "this year spending astronomical sums for jewelry, furs, fine clothes and other luxuries."

Fur Buying Boom

"In department stores," Vinson said, "women spent 104 per cent more for furs in July, 1943, than they spent in July, 1942. Likewise, they spent, in the same month, 65 per cent more for coats and suits, 37 per cent more for dresses, 30 per cent more for blouses, skirts and sportswear . . ."

The American people, Vinson said, are also spending an increased amount to eat, drink and make merry.

"In August, 1943," he said, "in the middle of this second year of allegedly total war, receipts of eating and drinking places were 27 per cent higher than in August of the previous year. Expenditures in theaters, cabarets, concerts and other places of amusement rose 30 per cent over the same period . . .

"As compared with the average for the typical prewar years, 1936-39, expenditures in clothing stores had increased 102 per cent, at eating and drinking places 143 per cent and in jewelry stores 218 per cent."

"Who, in the face of these startling figures," asked Vinson, "will contend that the American people cannot pay more taxes?"

The Economic Stabilization Director read the bankers a letter from an American soldier in West Africa which told how men there are saving money for the time they get back home, when some are planning to be married, to put their money in a home or farm.

As he finished reading the letter, Judge Vinson pledged that "insofar as I have power to stop it, no orgy of inflation will prevent this American hero's simple dream from becoming a living reality."

Declaring that the aggregate income of individuals is at a record level, Vinson said the national income for 1944 will reach 157 billion dollars. Consumer goods and services will amount to 90 billion dollars. State, local and Federal taxes will siphon off 20 billion dollars. Approximately nine billion will go into savings and he estimated war bond purchases for the year at 17 billions.

That will leave 20 billion dollars in spendable money for which there will be no goods, Vinson said.

Vinson declared experience has shown it unlikely that voluntary war bond purchases will drain off the excess 20 billion dollars. That leaves a choice, he said, between heavier taxes and inflation.

Brewster Union Head Admits Aliases and False Statements

first told the committee he got his aliases out of "a telephone book or maybe a hat."

He said he used the name Thomas Vincent De Lorenzo because he thought "it sounded pretty." Later he said he adopted it because his sister, who was studying Italian in college, used it.

He said he used aliases both for personal and business reasons. Among his aliases, he said, were James Harris, Sidney Taurig and half a dozen others.

Asked to explain why he used the name Taurig, which is borne by a member of his union, he consented to answer only in whispers to the subcommittee.

Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, after hearing the answer, said the record might stand only that he had used it "for personal reasons."

Hebert, aggressive, hard-boiled former city editor of a New Orleans newspaper, repeatedly charged the witness with having lied in official documents, ruthlessly forcing admissions of the fact from the witness.

De Lorenzo, pressed to state when he was going to stop lying told Hebert, "I will always lie in order to get a job to support my family." His first lies were told, he said, when his wife demanded he withdraw from the wholesale wine business in 1939 because she thought he was "drinking too much," and demanded he get a regular job with regular hours.

Letters of Denial

In order to get employment at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., De Lorenzo said, he gave false statements as to his previous employment, which he said in the application had been with other aircraft companies. Faced with letter after letter of denial from the aircraft companies denying he had worked there slapped on the committee bench by the hard-driving Hebert, the witness said he had to have the job. He admitted presenting a false record of a Catholic baptism, and said he had never been baptized. He said he increased his age from 30 to 37 in the application at Brewster and gave a false birth date because the company was not then anxious to hire young men.

All the other record falsifications, except that on income tax, and his change of name in New York courts, the witness said, stemmed from attempts to make other records gee with the one he had built up at Brewster.

"I Just Signed It"

On his Selective Service application, De Lorenzo stated, he gave a false record.

He said he did not know about such statements as that he was "unmarried" in 1940 on his application for a change of name in the courts of New York.

"My lawyer drew that up," he said. "I don't know why he put that in. I just signed it."

The petition for a legal change of name also disclosed that the witness had sworn he had never been arrested. Hebert, reading from records, asked if he had not been arrested for vehicular homicide in 1933. De Lorenzo acknowledged the indictment but said the case had been dismissed.

Hands Shake

Pressing the union leader so hard that De Lorenzo's hands shook as he lifted papers, Hebert asked him about an application for a Civil Service position as a member of the War Labor Board's labor panel. De Lorenzo admitted that he had not included records of the vehicular homicide indictment or of a charge of inciting to riot in a Bendix aviation strike in 1941, a strike in which, he later told the committee, he brought out 2000 Brewster workers to help from a plant located only 20 miles away.

Asked why he had not included these and a long string of traffic violations, De Lorenzo said:

"I just didn't feel like it, that's all."

In the Civil Service examination the question was asked if any members of the applicant's family were born outside the United States. De Lorenzo, according to Hebert and his own admissions, had answered the question in the negative. Previous admissions and evidence showed his father was born in Poland, his mother in Hungary.

In reply De Lorenzo asked if his father and mother were considered part of his family.

De Lorenzo Yawns

An application for an alcohol permit signed in 1934 by De Lorenzo in the name of Harry Posner, as president of the Atlas Wine Co., again denied any record of indictments, the record showed.

De Lorenzo yawned at this point, bringing the tart comment from Hebert:

"Oh, I hope we are not boring you."

The witness admitted that he had filed a 1940 income tax return under the name of Harry Posner, listing his occupation as a salesman, while in reality he had been employed as De Lorenzo at Brewster. He claimed, however, that he had filed the correct amount, and said he guessed he used the name Posner because he had started something he couldn't get out of.

Later he was asked why, in view of the fact that he had taken the job with Brewster to please his wife, testifying that the job paid far less than he had previously earned, he had not filed income tax returns in 1938 and 1939. He could not remember. He said he didn't know what the law was then.

"I certainly had no fraud in mind," De Lorenzo asserted.

Draft Question

On the Selective Service question Hebert asked:

"Why did you tell your draft board that you worked as an aircraft assembler from 1937 to 1939 and from 1935 to 1937 as a riveter?" (Previous testimony had proved this record false.)

"Did you have to lie to get a job in the Army?" the Louisiana Congressman inquired.

De Lorenzo was also questioned as to when he met F. William Zelcer, international munitions dealer who owned the White Horse Tavern, a famous speakeasy in New York during prohibition days. He said he met him two and a half years ago at the Brewster plant and had never heard of the White Horse Tavern.

Asked what he was doing during prohibition years, the witness said he had been a shipping clerk with a shirt manufacturer and then a shipping clerk with a bottling company. He said the company records would bear out this employment.

It was only on his personal record that the witness was shaken. When it came to matters concerning Local 365, UAW-CIO, of which he is president, De Lorenzo was firm and positive.

He blamed the managements put in by the Navy Department, those of C. A. Van Duzen and Frederick J. Riebel, jr., predecessors of Henry J. Kaiser, new company president, for all the failures of production at Brewster.

"Men were begging for work," De Lorenzo said earnestly. "They could do in two hours what they were having to do in 10."

Lack of Material

Because of lack of material, the plant was used only to one-third of capacity all the time, De Lorenzo said. He asserted that both Van Duzen and Riebel spent their time at Brewster trying to "bust the union" instead of concentrating on production problems they had been put in by the Navy Department to handle. He declared that both refused to let their high-priced $30,000 per annum labor relations men handle the labor difficulties, and treated them like office boys.

These two managements started all the labor rows at Brewster, De Lorenzo said. Questioned by Drewry about 600,000 man-hours Navy witnesses had testified had been lost in strikes and slowdowns at Brewster, De Lorenzo shot back:

"Your picture is one-sided. You don't mention the millions of hours lost by inefficient management."

Asked about the four plant guards who were also members of the U. S. Coast Guard Reserve (Temporary) over whom the August strike was called, De Lorenzo termed them "Boy Scouts."

Were Not in Uniform

He pointed out that they had practically no training, were not paid by the Coast Guard, were not in Coast Guard uniform, received no Government compensation or care for injuries such as men in the armed forces, and were not considered members of the armed forces under Selective Service regulations.

He said the Navy had received union help in persuading the men to join the reserve on the pledge that their seniority rights and other privileges would not be disturbed.

On the matter of the strike, De Lorenzo flatly denied responsibility. He said he had advised against it because of the Smith-Connally Act, but the shop stewards called it and the union membership backed them up.

The union leader said he did not believe in strikes in time of war, but he believed in the right of "threat to strike." He defended his recent action in fighting for a resolution at the UAW convention that would rescind labor's "no-strike" pledge in wartime by saying that it would put R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW union, in a better bargaining position to obtain concessions from the President of the United States.

Hebert Stung

Stung to obvious anger, Hebert lashed out. "Do you mean that you think abandonment of the no-strike pledge would put the union in a better position to deliver a mandate to the Commander in Chief to bargain with it for concession?"

"I've seen Congress bargain with the President," retorted De Lorenzo, "I don't see anything wrong with it."

Carrying the fight in the teeth of the opposition, the union leader charged.

"Congress let us down by failing to keep prices down. We would be satisfied without wage gains if the cost of living was kept pegged down.

"Here are managements getting new plants, making untold profits. We're not getting equal treatment."

Regarding some of his much quoted statements regarding the fact that he did not want to see labor lose its gains during the war, De Lorenzo said:

"I am frank to say in our organization we're not getting an equal deal. Some feel we've given up too much already and if we give up any more we'll wind up with a Fascist form of government. Some of us don't want that."

Well-Armed

De Lorenzo and Paul Krebs, union secretary, arrived for the hearing armed with a large suitcase, two briefcases and two boxes full of duplicate discharge slips of Brewster employes totaling some 2000, dated from January, 1941, when the so-called "hellish" contract went into effect, to the end of last month. The testimony was designed to show that a clause in the contract requiring union and management agreement on discharges worked no hardship on management. The committee evidenced little interest in the documents, which the union president asked to leave with the investigators to show that Local 365 had agreed without raising objection to 95 per cent of the discharges.

The witness was questioned about the new contract which he signed Wednesday with Kaiser. The union president said he was not satisfied with the contract because instead of gaining anything for the union it had made concessions to management.

Drewry Disagrees

Drewry was in sharp disagreement with that interpretation.

"I've read a good deal about the ability of Henry Kaiser," he said, "and I congratulate you on getting a better contract out of Kaiser than the old one." Drewry termed the new contract "unworkable."

He said while he was not threatening the witness he was warning that if planes are not produced at Brewster the Navy's plane contracts should be canceled.

De Lorenzo asserted his confidence that the new union-management relations were such that planes would be produced.

"Kaiser is the first man I've seen in 15 months in that management who has the intelligence, brains, ability and forcefulness to run that plant," De Lorenzo asserted.

"Riebel and Van Duzen are not fit to black his shoes."

De Lorenzo will appear again today at 10 a. m. before the subcommittee. Hebert yesterday emphasized that the personal details of the life of De Lorenzo he had brought out were entered in the attack as going to prove the credibility of the witness.

Feared Death From Bioff, Warner Says

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Albert Warner, vice president of Warner Brothers, Inc., movie producing company, said today he feared he might be killed if he complained to authorities about huge sums of money demanded by Willie Bioff, racketeer labor leader.

Now a major in the Army, Warner testified in Federal Court as a Government witness at a trial of eight other men charged with conspiracy to extort more than one million dollars from the film industry.

He declared his company paid $50,000 to Bioiff in 1936, and $30,000 the next year so the scar-faced racketeer would not call a strike of the International Alliance of Theater and Stage Employes.

He said he did not call for aid from Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who, then, as district attorney, was waging a campaign against racketeers, or froim other law enforcement officials because he "was afraid protection would come too late."

Earlier in the day, Biooff's brother-in-law, Norman Thaw Nelson, testified he received commissions of $77,448 for sale of raw film to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, but turned all of its except $125 a week over to Bioff, who had paid Nelson's income tax on the entire amount.

Rep. Gore in 1-A; Tennessean to Be Army Private

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 4 (AP).—The youngest member of Tennessee's congressional delegation, 36-year-old Representative Arnold Gore, has been placed in 1-A by the Smith County Selective Service Board and is listed in the December call. He waived exemption because of his office.

At his Carthage home today, Gore said if he passes his physical examinations he would enter the Army as a private. He said he had been in Carthage this week making preparations to get away to the Army in the event that he is accepted.

"Of course I will draw no salary—except that of a soldier," he said.

Mrs. Gore, now assistant director of the Red Cross for the eastern area, is expected to take over the office duties. She is a graduate of law. Gore said he would ask for a congressional leave of absence.

Dubose Removed From Position At Cramp Ship Co.

Chairman Kilgore (Democrat) of West Virginia of a Senate Truman subcommittee on shipbuilding said last night that Rear Admiral William G. Dubose (retired) had been removed from active management in the Cramp Shipbuilding Co. yard in Philadelphia.

Kilgore issued a statement in which he asserted that Dubose's removal was announced to a closed session of the subcommittee yesterday by Rear Admiral E. L. Cochrane, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships.

Asserting that "there seems to be no question but that the management was not equal to that of our better naval shipyards," Kilgore expressed belief Dubose's removal as chairman of the board from actual managerial duties in the yards and "other steps" outlined at the hearing "will result in substantial improvement" in production.

Newsprint Bonus Plan Announced by WPB

The War Production Board (WPB) yesterday announced a bonus system for newsprint use, which will allow a newspaper publisher using less than his quota in the last quarter of 1943 to carry over this saving for use in the first quarter of 1944.

CIO Praises Roosevelt, Balks At Supporting Candidate Now

Philadelphia, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) praised President Roosevelt today but refrained from committing itself to support any presidential candidate in 1944.

A "statement of political action" adopted by the CIO's sixth annual national convention declared that Mr. Roosevelt "more consistently than any other man in public life" has voiced "the aims and aspirations of the common men and women of America."

But although Sidney Hillman, chairman of the political action committee, told wildly cheering delegates he would raise his voice for the President's nomination "if elections were to be held in the next two or three months," he added:

"We will make our commitments for 1944 in 1944 and I hope by then that we will have power enough to make ourselves heard before the nominating."

CIO President Philip Murray told the convention he was "in no mood to deliver the CIO lock, stock and barrel to any man or party in the world."

"I don't like Washington today," Murray declared. "The administrative agencies are throttling every labor organization in America.

"Under those circumstances it would be regrettable if the CIO takes untimely action to condemn or support the tendencies of the Administration."

The political action statement asserted that the Seventy-eighth Congress has been "dominated" by "the forces of reaction."

"The Republican Party, in which the reactionaries have their greatest concentration and where the outright appeasers and defeatists are mainly represented, has not hesitated to make partisan political capital of the difficulties and dislocations arising out of the war effort," the statement continued.

"Anti-Administration members of the President's own party have denied him their support."

The statement promised to "abstain from and discourage" any attempt to form a new political party.

Police and Army Sift Killing of D. C. Soldier

Rehoboth Beach, Del., Nov. 4 (INS). Army authorities announced tonight that Warrant Officer John Hubert Worthington of Washington, D. C., died of a gunshot wound today in his Behoboth beach residence, formerly the home of the millionaire Waterman pen family.

Circumstances of Worthington's death are not known, the announcement said, and a board of Army officers and police is investigating.

Worthington, who was stationed at headquarters of the harbor defenses at Cape Henlopen, is survived by his wife, Elaine, a 5-year-old son, and his mother, Mrs. S. J. Gilroy of Washington.

The Worthington family moved into the Waterman mansion in June. Worthington was described as an Army veteran of many years service who rose through the ranks to the post he held at his death. Mrs. Worthington, who declined to meet reporters this evening, is a graduate of George Washington University.

MacNider Wins Legion of Merit

Southwest Pacific Allied Headquarters (Friday), Nov. 5 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Hanford MacNider of Mason City, Iowa, today received an award of the Legion of Merit which was personally pinned on him by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

MacNider, former Assistant Secretary of War, Minister to Canada and national commander of the American Legion, was given the Legion of Merit "for exceptionally meritorious conduct in performance of outstanding services," in New Guinea, as commander of a combined operational service command.

Gen. Clark's Pilot Killed in Italy

El Centro, Calif., Nov. 4 (AP).—Capt. James Hall, 24, staff officer of Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark, was killed in Italy October 26, the War Department has notified his widow, Mrs. Barbara Ruth Hall.

Captain Hall was General Clark's personal pilot, and participated in the invasion of Sicily.

Women Spies Put Behind Lines

Stockholm, Nov. 4 (AP).—Russia was reported today to be sending "beautiful and intelligent" women spies behind the German lines—parachuting them down at night.

The Svenska Morgonbladet quoted a German war correspondent as saying the women carried radio transmitters.

42 Dog Owners Are Fined in Prince Georges

Forty-two Prince Georges County dog owners were fined $50 each in two county police courts yesterday after pleading guilty to charges of violation of the county's quarantine on dogs.

Fines in all the cases were suspended, however, upon the recommendation of county prosecutors provided the defendants pay court costs of $3.50 each. Judge Alan Bowie heard 22 cases in the Hyattsville Court while Judge Walter L. Green tried 20 in the Capitol Heights Court.

Meanwhile, Metropolitan police yesterday received reports that four more persons were bitten by dogs and a 4-year-old girl was bitten by a cat in the District.

Delivers Lecture

In the Hyattsville court, Judge Bowie heard several of the dog cases before the crowded courtroom, then lined up the rest of the defendants, accepted their guilty pleas and suspended $50 fines after delivering a stern lecture on the seriousness of the current rabies epidemic. He added a warning that a second offense would mean the automatic collection of the fine and possibly the assessment of another $50 fine.

Before sentencing each defendant, Judge Bowie asked them individually how their pets happened to be running at large. Some of the answers he received caused laughter in the courtroom. When one man declared that the milkman had let the dog out as he was leaving the house, Judge Bowie remarked, "The milkman gets blamed for a lot of things these days." Another man said that his dog had escaped from his yard to run to play with the approaching police that made the arrest.

Most of the women defendants were inclined to be argumentative while the men simply said that their dogs had escaped by accident and let it go at that.

Officer Richard A. Pearson, who filed most of the complaints aired in the Hyattsville Court, told the judge that when he visited a Negro community Wednesday, the residents disclaimed ownership of the many dogs, apparently for fear that they would have to pay a $50 fine. He said that he warned the residents that he would have to shoot the dogs if they were not claimed, most of them said, "go ahead and shoot." Before he left, he said, he had killed 21 dogs.

In Washington, it was reported that Mrs. Anna M. Bellow, 51, of 1246 Bladensburg rd. ne., mother of Staff Sergt. John Bellow, who is now overseas, was bitten by a pet dog left in her custody by her son. The dog died a few hours later as the result of a cold for which he was under treatment, the veterinarian said. There was no indication of rabies, he said.

Wilbur K. Gayhart, 13, of 1320 Monroe st. nw., was treated for dog bite by a private physician after the lad had been attacked by a collie near his home. The animal was said by police to have belonged to Theo Parreco of 1915 Shepherd st. ne.

Elizabeth Harmon, 3, of 1629 22d st. se., while playing in the rear yard of 1625 22d st. se., was bitten on the left cheek by a dog owned, police said, by William Funk. She was treated at the Navy Yard Dispensary.

Charles Evans, 34, of 1843 Mintwood pl. nw., a driver for Thompson's Dairy, reported that while delivering milk at 3109 G st. se. Wednesday, he was bitten on the left leg by a dog owned by Evelyn Sigmon, of the G st. address. He was treated at the Washington Clinic.

Cecelia Young, 4, of 101 Irvington st. nw., while playing in the A. & P. Grocery Store at 3933 S. Capitol st. October 28, was bitten on the right hand by a cat said to be owned by George Delahay, manager of the store. She was treated at St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday.

In the Silver Spring Court of Montgomery County Mrs. Gladys Rohrer, 714 Park ave., Takoma Park, Md., pleaded guilty before Trial Magistrate Ralph G. Shure, on charges violating the dog quarantine in Montgomery.

Several residents on Park ave. testified that Mrs. Rohrer's dog jumped against them. One woman whose name police refused to give, said the dog tore a fur piece she was wearing. Police stated they had warned Mrs. Rohrer several times and she promised to dispose of the pet. The case was postponed until Wednesday.

Speaking before the Brookland Citizens Association last night Dr. M. P. Isaminger of the District Department of Health predicted an early check to the rabies epidemic here. He said this was the worst outbreak of rabies in the city since 1932.

Resolutions indorsing the work of Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, were adopted at the meeting.

Thanksgiving Turkeys Leave For Far-Flung Battle Fronts

"And to think we used to complain when there were two Thanksgivings!" is likely to be the theme of American soldiers all over the world November 25—for that kind, paternal old quartermaster general has just completed shipments of 10 million pounds of turkey for Johnny Doughboy's extra-special dinner.

The policy is one pound per American tummy, plus the customary assortment of pumpkin pie, apples, grapes, candies, nuts and coffee. What, with all this and vetegables too, the gay Thanksbiving dinners at grandma's house are likely to fade into obscure memory and possibly granny herself would be willing to swap places with Johnny on Attu, ration points being what they are.

The kind wishes of the quartermaster general notwithstanding, our comrades in arms actually owe it all to former President William Howard Taft, who wasn't opposed to a healthy meal himself and established formal festival feasting for members of our armed forces.

These days, of course, the lads who man the ships and the Air Transport command rate an extra slice and credit for an assist. But after Taft set the style, President Herbert Hoover (a handy man at feeding allies, too, you will recall) made overeating on holidays just about mandatory by executive order in 1932.

In round figures, about eight million pounds of turkey will be consumed by the Army on Thanksgiving Day and the remaining two million by the Navy. As for civilians—well, the OPA isn't going to stop you from paying a token visit to Grandma's house, just in case!

Dr. Buss, Missing In Philippines, Is Now on Way Home

Port Elizabeth, Union of South Africa, Nov. 4 (AP).—The long unanswered question of what had happened to Dr. Claude A. Buss of Los Angeles, executive assistant to the U. S. High Commissioner of the Philippines, has been solved by his repatriation along with other Americans arriving here aboard the Gripsholm.

However, the remainder of his staff still was detained in internment camps at Santo Tomas and Los Banos in the islands.

Dr. Buss had been unable to communicate with his family at Sunbury, Pa., or with Commissioner Francis Sayre, who escaped in a submarine, and some fears had been expressed for his safety, but he joined the other repatriates in good physical condition.

OPA Overhauling Restaurant Food Rationing System

By International News Service

Office of Price Administration spokesmen said last night the agency is revising food rationing regulations for restaurants, but insisted coupon rationing for the Nation's 30 million customers is not contemplated.

Commenting on a statement by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat) of New York that OPA is studying anew the complicated problem of food control for public eating places, agency representatives siad:

"The whole ration program is being gone over from stem to stern for institutional users, including eating places, public institutions and boarding houses.

"This is being done with a view toward simplification of regulations, determining whether the ration program as it works now, is fiar, whether there are any loopholes in it and whether some restaurants or other institutional places are getting more food than they should."

Tow Crane Driver Hurt In Collision With Bus

John Karris, 33, of 489 E st. sw., was treated for minor lacerations at Casualty Hospital when the tow-crane he was driving crashed against a parked bus at Barney Circle, Pennsylvania ave. se. last night.

The operator of the bus, Victor M. Winebrenner, 26, of 6522 Buchanan rd., Maryland Park, Md., escaped injury. There were no passengers on the bus at the time.

Coal Price Increase Seen Here Because of Pay Raise

Washingtonians face a probable boost in the price of coal as the result of Secretary of the Interior Ickes' granting miners a pay raise of $1.50 a day, dealers here said yesterday.

Local retail merchants said the coal prices current in the city had already been fixed by the OPA, after conferring with the dealers, and only a slender margin of profit was allowed them.

So slender is this margin, they said, that they would be unable to absorb any advance in price that might be passed on to them from the mine operators.

Correspondingly they asserted their understanding was that a similarly small margin of profit had been allowed the mine operators.

Hence, it appears a certainty that the pay raise granted to the miners will be passed on down the line to the ultimate consumer, if the War Labor Board approves of the raise.

In the meantime OPA spokesmen refused to commit themselves on whether or not the price of coal would be raised. They said they would not be in a position to make any statements until definite action had been taken by the War Labor Board, or until the pay raise became a certainty.

Local dealers were still uncertain as to coal shipments to the city. They pointed out that while published reports showed some of the mines reopened they could not say whether the mines from which Washington gets its coal had resumed operation.

As a result the restrictions of one ton of soft coal or half a ton of hard to a customer are remaining in force until the supply situation becomes settled.

Poll Shows House GOP for Dewey

Representative Allen (Republican) of Illinois said yesterday he had polled 168 of the 206 Republican members of the House and found overwhelming support for Governor Dewey of New York for the GOP presidential nomination.

Dewey, Allen told reporters, received 89 votes; General MacArthur, 30; Governor Bricker of Ohio, 12; Senator Taft of Ohio, 10; Governor Warren of California, 6; Wendell Willkie, 6; Governor Green of Illinois, 3; Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, 3; Governor Saltonstall of Massachusetts, 3; Governor Stassen of Minnesota, 2; Senator Brooks of Illinois, 1, with three members undecided.

Bougainville

The rising tempo of Allied action in the southwest Pacific is reflected in the landing by American Marines this week on the Japanese stronghold of Bougainville Island in the western Solomons. For that development follows close on the heels of the occupation of Choiseul and Treasury Islands, where fighting is still going on. In other words, instead of moving one step at a time, as was the case when the Solomons venture was first undertaken well over a year ago, we are now in a position to carry out several related moves at once. And the naval and air balance of power has shifted so drastically in our favor that the enemy now fears to risk any large portion of his strength to combat us. Indeed, this appears to have disappointed our military and naval leaders. All they are asking nowadays is a chance to come to grips with the Japanese navy.

The next major move after Bougainville is, obviously, Rabaul, which the Japanese have transformed during the long months of their occupancy into a formidable naval and air base. In view of the strong positions we now hold on the east coast of New Guinea, in the Trobiand and Woodlark Islands and in the western Solomons, it is doubtful whether the enemy could long sustain his position at Rabaul in the face of attack from several directions at once. With Rabaul in our hands, it would then be possible to abandon the strategy of island hopping which was forced upon us by the circumstances in which we found ourselves after the defeats that followed Pearl Harbor, and begin striking out at the very heart of enemy strength in the Marshall, Gilbert and Marianas Islands and points north.

Food Subsidies

Senator Byrd, commenting on President Roosevelt's Monday message to Congress urging continuance of food subsidies, charges that the Commodity Credit Corp. and 50-odd other Government agencies are paying out large sums for food subsidies without specific approval of Congress. That may be true. But whose fault is it? Blame for what the Senator calls the "by-passing" of Congress must be shouldered by Congress itself. For it has refused repeatedly to lay down general policies for the guidance of subsidizing agencies, and by this inaction has tacitly set the seal of approval on the Administration's subsidization program. Moreover, when Congress finally voted last summer to forbid payment of subsidies by the CCC, the bill encountered a presidential veto which was sustained by the House. Having permitted the development of an intricate system of controls over food prices in which subsidies play an important role, Congress would be rash, indeed, suddenly to ban all such payments and bring about sharp increases in consumer food prices. At this juncture it might better be studying the subsidy program with a view to determining how far it is willing to go along with the Administration program, and how much it is prepared to spend on subsidies.

In reaching a decision on these matters the President's Monday message should be helpful. He makes a very persuasive appeal for food subsidies as a means of stimulating increased production of certain farm products without bringing about increases of prices all along the line. As the President admits, subsidies are certainly not needed to improve the farmer's economic position, because farmers as a class are better off today than they have been in many years. Moreover, their per capita income has risen more rapidly since the outbreak of war than has the income of other classes. Nevertheless, the prosperity of the farming population provides no assurance that individual farmers will grow as much as required of the kinds of foods needed to meet the demands of ourselves and our allies. Indeed it is quite sure that they will not do so unless given some financial incentive either in the form of higher prices for their output, price-supporting loans or subsidies. If food prices are to be kept from mounting steadily, therefore, the only practicable means of achieving more ambitious production goals is afforded by subsidies. In some cases, small sums can, as the President states, be used effectively for such purposes, making it possible to avoid pyramiding prices all down the line from primary producer to ultimate consumer.

Congress has been informed that the support-price program of the CCC for 1943 is expected to cost the Government about 350 million dollars, while the RFC rollback subsidies for reducing meat and butter prices will cost an additional 450 million dollars. These are huge sums and there is, of course, danger that subsidies like "a little inflation that will not hurt anyone," may become a vicious habit. Congress rightly fears abuse of the subsidization principle and would be well advised to establish limits to the amounts that might be expended by Government agencies in the form of subsidies. The Post believes, however, that carefully selected subsidy payments are indispensable features of a food-control program that attempts to combine stability of food prices with provision for increased production.

King Lewis

John L. Lewis has succeeded in splitting the Government of the United States. Whether the coal miners get an increase of $1.12½ a day, as proposed by the War Labor Board, or $1.50, as proposed by the Custodian of Mines, Harold L. Ickes, is of secondary importance. The salient fact is that Mr. Lewis has managed to deal with separate spokesmen for the Government and to play them off against one another until continued denial of his demands threatens the vital war industries of the country.

The function of the WLB is to maintain the stabilization program in respect to wages. The function of Mr. Ickes, in relation to the coal crisis, is to get coal mined. The WLB fulfilled its function by turning down the Lewis proposal as embodied in the Illinois agreement and offering in its place a modified contract consistent with stabilization principles. Mr. Ickes fulfilled his function by giving John Lewis a larger measure of what he wanted in return for a pledge that the miners would go back to their jobs. The root of the trouble here is that the two Government agents were working at cross-purposes—or at least for quite different purposes. Mr. Lewis took full advantage of their disunity.

Mr. Ickes is said to have asserted that he could have ended the coal crisis at any time in the past few months, if only the WLB had not interfered. Of course he could have done so. Any controversy can be settled if one party is willing to yield. And Mr. Ickes has yielded on a principle of the very first importance. He has negotiated with the miners while they were out on strike. This is something which the WLB consistently refused to do. Its refusal was specifically upheld by Mr. Roosevelt. Perhaps Mr. Ickes interpreted the President's directive as authorizing him to negotiate with the miners at once—an exceedingly strained interpretation in our judgment. In any case he has established a highly dangerous precedent.

To negotiate with men who are out on strike is to invite strikes by other workers. In this particular case it has beclouded the entire settlement. For it is a settlement made under threat, made at the point of a pistol in the hand of John Lewis. Whatever judgment the WLB passes on this Ickes-Lewis agreement will be suspect. And workers everywhere will wonder if they cannot gain their ends through pressure and blackmail. Even considering the vital needs of war, Mr. Ickes has paid an exorbitant price for the production of coal.

Aurelio's Victory

Notwithstanding the recent revelations concerning his unsavory political associations, and the recent disbarment proceedings against him, Thomas A. Aurelio has been elected a Supreme Court justice in New York. The Democratic and Republican machine vote was strong enough to overcome all the scandal and the subsequent repudiation of him by the local organizations of those parties. Unless Mr. Aurelio should choose to resign, it will require a two-thirds vote of the Legislature at Albany to remove him from the bench. Of Aurelio's resignation there seems little likelinood, and, failing the other solution, the citizens of New York State must reconcile themselves to the notion of a Supreme Court justice who pledged his "undying loyalty" to a former bootlegger and gambling machine entrepreneur, one Mr. Frank Costello who had promoted Aurelio's nomination.

Offhand it seems a pretty sad commentary on the democratic process, coming at a time when as a Nation we have committed ourselves to the establishment or reestablishment of democracy elsewhere in the world. So in a sense it is. It is true that New York City politics, even politics involving the judiciary, have seldom smelled exclusively of rosewater. It may be also true that, judged by Tammany political mores, Mr. Aurelio's principal sin was not so much his gratitude to Mr. Costello as the indiscretion of communicating it over a tapped wire. Still an indiscretion of this character might seem enough in itself to disqualify him for service on the bench.

In this particular instance the bipartisan system of judicial nominations appears to have defeated the purpose for which it was designed, that is, of separating the election of judges from party politics. Had Aurelio's name been presented to the voters as the candidate of a single party, it is probable that the straight-ticket ballots would not have sufficed to elect him. Even with the assistance of both Democratic and Republican straight-ticket voters, he ran considerably behind the six other judges chosen in the same judicial district.

Two points, therefore, seem pretty clear: first, that the bipartisan or multipartisan system of nominating judges is not such a great improvement over the old system as had been supposed; second, that a very considerable section of the citizenry, at least in the First Judicial District of New York, is not too gravely concerned about the quality or the personal associations of the judges it elects. The system of the appointment of judges by the Executive, subject to confirmation by the Legislature, as in the case of the Federal bench, is not without drawbacks and dangers, and represents something less than pure democracy. But it does seem an insurance against the sort of anomaly that has occurred in New York; that is to say, the acceptance by the voters of a candidate whose aura had become just a bit too ripe for the not overdelicate nostrils of machine politicians.

Debate In The Dark

There can be only gratification that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee moved so quickly to bring its resolution on the postwar world into line with the four-power agreement signed at Moscow. By this means the Senate can put a definite stamp of approval on the spadework that has been done by the conference of foreign ministers. Its action will be directly related to current realities instead of being only a vague and hesitant shot into the dark.

While this turn of events is a happy one, it is well to remember that it came about quite accidentally. The Senate has been able to act in the light of knowledge of present realities only because the debate on the Connally resolution lasted longer than was anticipated. Had it voted last week, the Senate would probably have approved the Connally resolution in a sort of intellectual vacuum. For there is no indication that even the leaders in the Foreign Relations Committee were kept informed as to the progress of the Moscow conference. This lack of a working relationship between the Senate and the Department of State cannot be glossed over, not even by the very hopeful agreement that came out of the Moscow conference.

At the behest of Senator Willis, the Foreign Relations Committee also attached to the Connally resolution a clause to the effect that any treaty committing the United States to participation in collective security arrangemens shall become effective only when made with the advice and consent of the Senate. This appears to be nothing more nor less than a bit of advice to the Administration that it shall abide by the Constitution in working out postwar agreements. Senator Revercomb yesterday sought, without success, to put some teeth into this reminder by proposing that pacts arising out of the Moscow conference take treaty form. Because of the far-reaching character of some "executive agreements" that the President has entered into during recent years without consulting the Senate, that body may still feel it desirable to issue a reminder of the part the Constitution assigns to it in the conduct of our foreign relations. But the Senate would be naive indeed to assume that a mere phrase in the Connally resolution can safeguard its interests in this sphere.

What is needed, we think, is some positive means of bringing Senate leaders and the Administration's top policy-makers in foreign affairs into a working relationship. Regardless of how overwhelming the vote for the Connally resolution may be, the danger of misunderstanding between the executive and the Senate will remain unless there is a continuous meeting of minds between the two groups. The Senate cannot do its part by simply reserving the right to pass judgment upon the Administration's handiwork when the treaty-making has been completed. Rather, it should be part of the treaty-making process. It should not have to act in the dark, as it was apparently doing before the texts of the Moscow agreements were made public. Until the Senate is made a partner—an informed and active partner—in the task of developing and sustaining our foreign policy, we fear that the danger of working at cross-purposes will be ever present.

Margarine Tax

A bill calling for repeal of the restrictive taxes on the manufacture and sale of margarine products is being considered by the House Committee on Agriculture. We hope the bill will be pushed through to passage. There will never be a more propitious time than the present for getting rid of the punitive taxes that have been imposed on this industry not for the sake of revenue but for the benefit of the dairy interests. The latter have for years successfully fought to prevent the manufacturers of margarine from competing on an equal basis with producers of butter. By means of a high excise tax imposed on each pound of colored margarine, a lower tax on uncolored margarine, and special taxes on manufacturers and distributors of margarine, colored and uncolored, the industry has been severely handicapped in the competitive struggle, while the public has been prevented from enjoying to the full the benefits of a cheaper, harmless and highly nutritive substitute for butter.

With the demands of war causing an acute butter shortage, there is no present danger that butter sales will be unfavorably affected by removing the tax barriers to free and fair competition between butter and margarine. Since margarine is plainly labeled, there is likewise no danger that it will be palmed off on unsuspecting consumers as real butter. Hence, there is no valid reason why dairy farmers should continue to be protected against fair and open competition from other farmers producing the materials used for margarine manufacture. Under our competitive trade system, consumers are entitled to decide for themselves what they wish to buy, provided they know what they are getting.

THE VIGIL LIGHT

Light the warm jewels of the dark
And let the steadfast flame remember flame
As we remember prayer, low uttered,
And spoken in His name.

Now in the ruby cup the light
Becomes a word, the word a light,
Burning in beauty till the candle dies—
A prayer made manifest to sight.

Five Guarantees

By Mark Sullivan

Russia Assents

AMONG THE agreements made at Moscow by the three Foreign Secretaries—Mr. Molotov of Russia, Mr. Eden of Britain, Mr. Hull of the United States—there is one that is extraordinary. Nominally, it has to do with the future of Italy. Actually, its significance is far broader.

The three Foreign Secretaries laid down several policies having to do with the treatment of Italy, and especially the form of government later to be set up in that country. Among the policies is this:

"The Foreign Secretaries of the three governments are agreed that the following measures are important and should be put into effect . . . Freedom of speech, of religious worship, of political belief, of press and of public meeting, shall be restored in full measure to the Italian people . . ."

Here is a policy laid down for the government to be set up in Italy. It is laid down by the three nations who in the nature of things will have much to do with setting up the government that Italy is to have. The policy thus laid down includes five familiar guarantees: Freedom of speech, of religious worship, of political belief, of press and of public meeting. And—this is the extraordinary thing—one of the three governments laying down these guarantees, is a government, Russia—which itself has not practiced these guarantees.

WHAT PRECEDED the laying down of this extraordinary policy—extraordinary as respects Russia—we can only surmise. The Foreign Secretaries at Moscow knew that, among their responsibilities, they ought to make provision about the treatment of conquered enemy countries—about Italy already conquered, and Germany when conquered. They knew that their three governments, in the nature of things, would have much to do with whatever permanent form of government is later to be set up in Italy, and also in Germany when conquered. We may presume that they discussed what ought to be done. In any event we know they arrived at a declaration of policy containing the five guarantees quoted above.

That the American and British representatives at Moscow should agree on these guarantees is completely natural. The guarantees are taken almost literally from the Bill of Rights in the American Constitution, and from the British Constitution and common law. But the Russian government does not practice these guarantees.

Just what went on? Did Mr. Hull and Mr. Eden propose these guarantees, and Russia assent? Russia did not need to assent. Russia could have taken the position that there should be no statement of policy about the future government of Italy; or that, if there were such a statement it should be in general terms, not mentioning the five guarantees. And if Russia had taken that position, Mr. Hull and Mr. Eden might well have agreed to silence about the guarantees.

RUSSIA'S ACCEPTANCE of the guarantees must have been in the spirit of making a concession for the sake of cooperation. If so, it was a fine action on Russia's part and a hopeful sign for the future. It removes the fear—which has been held in some quarters and has been an impediment to cooperation—that Russia might use its power to impose its own form of government on Germany and other enemy or liberated countries in Europe.

The concession, on Russia's part, is material. For the Russian government might well have anticipated that the concession might embarrass it in its own country. It might have apprehended that the Russian people would ask why the Russian government should prescribe guarantees for the people of Italy—which the people of Russia do not have.

It may be that Russia's assent to these guarantees for Italy means that something deep and far-reaching is going on within Russia. Does it mean that Russia, under pressure of war or for other reasons, is going through a transformation in which the country is moving away from communism, and in the direction of liberal and democratic governments, of the type symbolized by the five guarantees?

There have been some signs of this. Under pressure of war, the Russian government has modified, or even reversed, several of its former policies. The changes have taken place in the fields of religion, education, management of the army, and industry.

Polish Figures

In the Sunday Post there was an article on the systematic depopulation of Poland "by means of a program of planned malnutrition." I don't suppose it makes any difference, but the tuberculosis death rates quoted in this article are impossible. It is stated that the tuberculosis death rate increased from 2850 per 100,000 inhabitants before the Nazi invasion to 8890 per 100,000 inhabitants at present, the time interval being a year.

I do not doubt the 300 per cent increase in tuberculosis mortality, but if the rate was 2850 per 100,000 in 1939, it was roughly 3? times as great as the tuberculosis in the United States at the same time! It was even more than twice as great as the United States death rate from all causes!

There's a decimal point wrong somewhere.

Russia

By Paul Schubert

Emergence Of A Power

THE IMPORTANCE of the part being played by Soviet Russia in present-day international affairs is eloquent testimony to the newly won prestige of Russia as a power. Performance counts. All nations of the world are perpetually on trial before their fellow nations.

The schism between Russia and the rest of the world, that followed the Russian revolution of 1918, is the penalty inevitably paid by those who defy the existing order of things.

Before the World War of 1914-1918, Russia was universally recognized as a power. In those days, school textbooks referred to Russia as an "autocratic" state. Russia's power lay in the semi-absolute rule of a group of upper-crust descendents of those who had emerged as the "strong men" of the past. The "aristocracy" was the product of feudalism—and European feudalism meant nothing more nor less than rule by the strong.

Russia was a power not by virtue of the outstanding traits of the Russian upper crust but because of geography, because of the tremendous numbers of the Russian people, because of the stamina and character shown by these people under pressure, because of the polyglot diversity of the races embraced by Russian soil, because of the inherent genius of the Slav and his Asiatic cousins.

THE POWER of Czarist Russia collapsed during that last great war. The mass ignorance fostered by the rulers of Czarist Russia as a step toward producing mass docility had bred a Russia unable to keep pace with industrialized western Europe. The warfare of massed manpower was not equal to the warfare of mass production. In 1917 Russia was defeated.

In that defeat, Russia was knocked from her place among the powers. Russia played little direct part in organizing the peace of 1918—little part in organizing the postwar world of 1919 and afterward.

True, the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, newly organized as the successor to Czarist Russia, aspired most ambitiously to a role in the postwar world. No country under the sun agitated more persistently in the effort to upset the domestic politics of other nations. The Russians preached world revolution. In the name of spreading communism, they aspired to world influence—for the only true communism was Russian communism, and its only true prophets were Russians.

DURING THIS period, however, the only things Russia seemed to have for export were violence and agitation.

Most European countries were thoroughly frightened of the Russian brand of violence. The words "communist" and "bolshevist" ceased to have economic or political significance and became synonymous with heavy-booted bloody-handed rapine, violence, destruction . . . The Russian was thought of as a man of limitless cruelty, of the greatest ingenuity in devising torture. The OGPU was a bugaboo of the blackest order.

Echoes of this European view of Russia are vivid in the speeches of Hitler and Goebbels.

From the American point of view, the great Russian sin was not so much violence as inefficiency. Few Americans realized that the Russians were climbing upward out of bottomless ignorance—that the achievements of which they boasted were measured by the yardstick of their former capacities, and not by comparison to our performance. Few Americans understood what the Russians were boasting about—or why they should boast at all—or why they should argue that their system was better than ours.

Performance counts.

As a power, Russia met the test in June, 1941, when the German masses struck east across the frontier.

Talk no longer counted. Boasts were idle. This was the showdown.

The outer world wouldn't have given a dime a dozen for Russia's chances. That was the penalty Russia paid for having talked so much. But it developed that the Russian nature had a secretive side, too. It developed that though the Russians lost ground, they won the critical battles. It developed that their equipment was good, their organization was good, their performance was good, their strategy was sound.

It developed that they were too much for the Germans.

Now it develops that they are both willing and intelligent enough to cooperate with their allies.

In the events of 1943 we see the emergence of a new power—and the acceptance of this power by other states. It has taken just 25 years to complete the cycle begun in 1918.

Old Residents

The suggestion of "Army Wife" in your issue of November 2 that elderly people leave Washington in order to make room for newcomers impels me to present the point of view of one of that group.

Does the lady think that we old people should give up the only homes we have, all our family connections, the diminishing number of our friends, the surroundings to which we have been accustomed for many years, to go to some strange place where we would be fish out of water and suffer discomfort and loneliness in our declining years? Does she think we should either turn over our treasured possessions to careless tenants or move our things out of our apartments which we lived in long before the war and which there is little probability we could ever get again, to live in some small town in a boarding house where "there are no lines in the grocery stores," if such a place exists? Does it never occur to "Army Wife" that she might stay at home?

Many of us old people are sharing our apartments with Army and Navy officers or warworkers; many of us are working for the Red Cross, knitting, and buying war bonds. We are not mere derelicts, occupying space that "Army Wife" believes she is entitled to. We went through World War I and did not shirk our responsibilities. We saw our sons go into that war and now we are parting with our grandsons and granddaughters as well. Aren't we worthy of some consideration?

More Food

It seems to me that some of the Congressmen who say we must produce food—and still more food—don't mean that at all.

Two million of the country's most prosperous farmers are producing at peak capacity. If we are to have the food we need it must come from another 1,500,000 farmers who, for lack of equipment and work stock, are living on idle acres and raising only a fraction of the food they could. These 1,500,000 underemployed, under equipped farmers must be helped.

And how do we help them?

A handful of Congressmen on the House Appropriations Committee rejects a presidential request for funds for Farm Security Administration in order to provide loans to low-income farmers who won't raise the crops they should without them.

Is this the way we produce the food our armies and our allies need? Is this the way we prepare for postwar plenty?

Or is this the way we prepare a food shortage helpful only to those selfish elements who want the excuse of scarcity to send prices and profits sky high?

Defense of OPA

As a proud member of the staff of what I consider the most progressive public agency which has ever existed in this country, it grieves me that as little should be known about the Office of Price Administration by the people of the Nation as is actually the case. That their own interests should therefore be perverted by their own ignorance of the true facts about the Office of Price Administration and its for-the-most-part conscientious staff, and by malicious misrepresentations and half-truths purveyed by radio commentators whose pockets are more full than their minds, is a fact particularly grievous to persons with access to the truth about the tremendous job the Office of Price Administration is doing.

Since your paper has consistently maintained an editorial policy sympathetic to the aims of the Office of Price Administration, it would be a considerable public service if you advocated to various radio forums of the air the debate of issues such as the subsidy-rollback program, between qualified representatives of the Office of Price Administration and persons on the "other" side of the fence.

The airing of such issues over the forum programs would do more to effectuate the job of the Office of Price Administration than a dozen departments of information and an enforcement staff of a million.

Credo

I believe that when my country is at war I should sacrifice for victory relying upon the fruits of victory for whatever restitutions they may bring.

I believe that all worthy American citizens, be they politicians, public officials, owners or managers of industry or employes, organized or unorganized, share this belief with me.

I believe that the chief requisite to a palpable demonstration of this creed in America is a deep popular conviction that others stand ready to match my personal sacrifices for victory.

I believe that the apparent contradictions to this creed (slackening, cheating for undue shares of rationed commodities, profiteering, waste and extravagance, strikes, and all other contradictory examples) spring from the suspicion that others are "getting theirs while the getting is good," and the persuasion of ourselves that we should all do so.

I believe that it is not too late for our country's leaders, if they are capable of acting without thought of political advantage or disadvantage, either personal or party, to invoke the spirit of this creed and see it accepted and acted upon by all worthy Americans.

Hungary's Dilemma

By Paul Winkler

Sees Early Peace

ALL SIGNS point to a burning desire on the part of the present Hungarian government to find a way out of the war, if it can do so without losing its own position of power. But that means that the influences which gave Hungary its pro-German orientation would be maintained; and the Allies would therefore be duped if they gave serious consideration to the separate peace feelers which are being thrown out by Budapest.

But if the pro-German Hungarians do not succeed in getting out of the war on their terms, they have to face the fear that anti-German Hungarians will succeed on a quite different basis. That fear was expressed October 7 at the convention of the Hungarian National Socialist Party by one of its deputies, Ladislas Baky, who said:

"The democratic middle class and the intellectuals have formed a brotherhood of arms with the Red internationalists, and, in alliance with them, they are trying to betray our ally, Germany, to whom we owe our territorial gains. Once more the country is permeated with the spirit of 1918—the spirit which will shatter into shreds all the results which nationalist Hungary has achieved in the last 25 years."

Private information from Hungary indicates that this is an accurate estimate of the situation, and that Hungary is indeed in a mood very like that which, on October 30, 1918, 12 days before the armistice, ended Hungary's participation in the war.

THE LATEST attempt of the political elements surrounding Horthy to find some solution different from that of 1918 by promoting what might be called a "Badoglio settlement" for Hungary has just failed. It was made by Gustav Gratz, a conservative politician, who went to Switzerland in order to get word from that neutral soil to London that Premier Nickolas von Kallay might resign, allowing Count Stephen Bethlen to take over the premiership, with the intent of collaborating with the Allies whenever, and to whatever extent, it would be possible to do so.

But Bethlen's name was not received with favor. It is true that he has retired from active political life since Hungary has been directly allied with the Nazis, but he had been closely associated with Horthy's ambiguous policies during the interim between two wars, he had been personally responsible for the pro-German orientation of Hungary which had set the stage for the alignment with the Nazis, and he is the personification of Hungarian irredentism. London apparently did not feel that the problem of creating a postwar situation in eastern Europe which would permit the nations of that region to live together in peaceful, constructive cooperation would be simplified by the existence in Hungary of a Premier whose first interest would be that of trying to regain from Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania the territories which Hungary held before 1918.

Gratz was too persistent to accept as final the negative answer he got in Switzerland. He went on instead to Turkey, where he tried to exploit the good relations between Turkey and Hungary by urging the Turks to intercede with the Allies for Bethlen. But the Turks were cold to the proposal, and Gratz gave up.

Hungary Will Fall

The fact is that Hungary will fall into the Allies' lap whenever the democracies want, provided conditions are such that Hungary can break away from the Germans. It is therefore unnecessary to accept the offers of Bethlen, or any other compromised Hungarian politicians, to provoke that event. It is possible that the Allies prefer not to allow this to happen too soon; for although there are no overwhelming German forces in Hungary at present, a sudden shift of regime previous to surrender would provoke fighting between Hungarians and Germans, and there might be a duplication of the case of Italy, in which surrender was accepted, but the surrendered found it impossible to deliver the country. The Allies have a chance in Hungary to profit by the Italian example, and to improve their technique in the difficult art of shifting a country from one side to the other.

There are certainly plenty of Hungarians willing to move to the Allied column. Secret celebrations occurred in Hungary on October 30, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Hungarian revolution, when the spirit of 1918 triumphed under Count Michael Karolyi. Karolyi is living in London today, a symbol of Hungarian democracy. But though he has remained politically active, he has no desire to become the post-surrender leader of Hungary, preferring to leave the task to the younger generation, and to those leaders who have remained in Hungary.

There are plenty of champions for the democratic cause in Hungary, and since they have been able to be more outspoken than the Italians, their names are better known than were those of Italian underground leaders.

Members Of Congress

I think that the people of this country will bitterly resent the action of those members of Congress who, after refusing to tax more heavily the people who are making money out of this war, vote instead to put a tax on writing letters, including letters to service men.

Tuesday's Election

By Ernest Lindley

Not An Index For 1944

AS BETWEEN the two major parties, the Republicans obviously were the gainers in the elections Tuesday. There were no surprising upsets, but in at least some of the contests, notably that for the Lieutenant-Governorship of New York, the Republican pluralities were higher than were generally expected. Also, the Republicans acquired some additional offices, most important of which is the Governorship of New Jersey.

LINDLEY

The additional offices won probably will strengthen the Republican organization. That is the normal effect, assuming that the offices are filled with reasonable competence. The election results as a whole may be expected to give the Republicans generally new zest for the national election of 1944. Thus the Republicans gain a little in the concrete and a great deal in morale.

It does not necessarily follow, however, that the elections Tuesday are a preview of 1944. They were scattered local elections, nearly every one of which was surrounded by peculiarly local issues and circumstances. The New York election was complicated by another Tammany scandal, which in no way reflected on the Democratic nominee for lieutenant-governorship or the national leadership of the party. To what extent it influenced the result, no one can say, but certainly it did not help the Democrats.

The Democrats in New York and in various other contests sought to make support of the President an issue. Obviously they did so because they thought the national leadership in Washington was an asset. The Republicans generally denied that national issues were at stake. They ran as loyal Americans dedicated to victory in the war. With few exceptions, they concentrated on local and State issues. In New York, they appealed for support of Governor Dewey's administration. On that issue, the New York Times came out in favor of the Republican nominee.

SO, THE Republicans generally came to the same conclusion as the Democrats concerning the prestige of the Roosevelt Administration. They avoided attacking it and insisted that national questions were not at issue. In 1930 and 1931, at the elections preceding the national overturn of 1932, Democrats seeking State and local offices took the opposite course. They attacked, as a rule the Republican Administration. And the Republican candidates generally denied that national issues were at stake. In 1930 and 1931 the practical politicians of both parties knew the Hoover Administration was unpopular.

In 1942, local issues were prominent, even in many of the contests for Congress. There was, also, a great deal of criticism of the New Deal and of the Roosevelt Administration's handling of certain of the home-front sectors during the war. But there were not many frontal attacks on Roosevelt; and a good many Republicans felt it necessary or desirable to assert that they supported him in his conduct of the war generally. The fact that we were at war and that he was the Commander in Chief probably had an inhibiting effect. But the military outlook was still dark when the election was held. The public did not know the American-British forces were about to land in North Africa and no one knew that within a few days Guadalcanal would be saved and the Japanese navy would suffer serious injury in two naval engagements.

SINCE a year ago, Roosevelt's stature has grown. His wisdom and skill in military affairs and in diplomacy have been demonstrated by outward events. Most politicians, regardless of party, would agree with those assertions. Moreover, polls taken by Gallup and others in recent weeks indicate a majority of the voters, representing a majority of the electoral college, now favor the reelection of Roosevelt if the war is still going on next November.

Much can and will happen during the next 12 months. The war against Germany may well be over by then, and the war against Japan may be going so well that no one is any longer in doubt that it can be concluded within a short time. No one can foresee the domestic political effects of the changes in the military and diplomatic situation during the next 12 months—even though all the changes are in our favor and add still more to the luster of Roosevelt.

Whether the war and the organization of the peace will completely dominate the national election next year is an open question. But certainly local issues will not. International and national questions will be in the forefront. The scattered elections Tuesday cannot be regarded as a true index to the public attitudes which will decide the election of 1944.

Off The Record

By Ed Reed

"If you really want to prevent double chins, why don't you tie that strap over your mouth?"

Nazis, Intent Upon Looting, Ignore Yank Paratroopers

In the last chapter, Lieut. Leon L. Tracy of West Hartford, Conn., told of the paratroop flight into hostile territory and the jump, and related how he and five of his men went into Avellino and blew up the main German north-south traffic artery; how German patrols then began searching for the Americans—at just about the same time that American artillery began to shell the traffic on the road.

By Lieut. Leon L. Tracy
(As Told to Richard Tregaskis)

United States Paratrooper Headquarters, Italy Nov. 4 (INS).—That shelling was darn good. None of it landed amongst us—we were just a few yards off the south side of the road; and all of it came pretty close to the target. One of the shells landed right on the road and knocked it out.

After that, there was a terrific traffic gluf; there was only one-lane traffic, and the trucks and tanks and half-tracks sat and honked their horns. When the shelling came, at about five-minute intervals, they had to get off the road and take cover.

The Germans never did catch us that night—like the others we had seen, they seemed more interested in moving traffic along the roads fast than in keeping patrols along the flanks.

In the morning I sent a corporal back to get the rest of the men, who were in Montefredane, a few miles up the road to Benevento.

But Corporal Ray (James B. Ray of Rome, Ga.) came through anyhow, bringing the men. I had told him to come down after a certain time if he didn't hear from me.

We lived in the villa for two days after that, watching the German traffic go by on the road right underneath our windows. There were big trucks, and medium tanks, half-tracks, and even some Mark VI Tiger tanks. The demolition we had carried out and the artillery damage, were patched up.

We grew very cocky, and besides standing in the windows and watching the Nazi traffic go by, we used to wander around the town. The Germans never left the roads except to loot. They would come in gangs, with a truck, and break into a store and carry off what they wanted. But they never searched the town for us, or seemed to care whether we were there or not.

Once the Germans came into the villa next door and did a little looting while we were killing chickens in our back yard. But they never came into our house.

The Germans broke into the bank in the town and took all the money, and once I saw them looting a jewelry store. There never seemed to be an officer in charge; the looting job was just a sort of diversion for a bunch of enlisted men.

A few days later, we could see from our window that the Jerries were mining the bridge on the Ospedeletto road. That meant they were planning to pull out—and that the Allied main force was probably getting close. We decided to try to hold them up a little.

That night, six of us went down where the Krauts were working. We crawled up close and opened fire. We hit one, and the rest of them carried him off the bridge and beat it in a truck.

A little while later, they came back cautiously and we shot them up and they ran out again. They came back some time later with two truckloads of infantry and two machine guns and set up the guns on either end of the road. We pulled out then—no use trying to fight a force like that; but we'd help up the mining operation anyhow.

The next morning, the Germans had finished mining the bridge and blew it up. That day I took a patrol through the town, but there wasn't a single Jerry in sight. They'd all pulled out.

At 12:45 in the afternoon we met a patrol from an American regiment which was pushing into Avellino. Our job was over.

A little rest seemed to be in order, so we got permission from the military government people to move into the best apartment house in town. We had decent Italian meals—quite a treat after living on grapes and hazel nuts, and we had pounds of French-fried potatoes, to say nothing of a few 10-gallon vats of vermouth we found in the place. Our story had been pretty rough at times, but anyhow it had a happy ending.

(Tomorrow: Another paratroop officer, who participated in the attack on German communications in Italy, vividly describes his feelings as he parachuted to earth behind the enemy's lines.)

Gallup Poll

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 4.—Despite Government's efforts to drain off surplus cash through higher taxes and bond drives, more than a quarter of all people say they can afford to buy or do things today that they could not afford a year ago, on the basis of an Institute survey.

These estimated 17 million persons throughout the country with extra cash jingling in their pockets offer a serious challenge to officials waging an uphill battle against the inflation spiral.

In making a check on surplus spending power throughout the Nation, the Institute had field reporters put this question to a carefully selected cross-section of voters in every State.

"Are you now able to buy or do things that you could not afford a year ago?"

A tabulation of results shows voters answering:

Yes	29%
No	71

Congressional committees wrestling with the inflation problem will be interested in knowing how the extra cash is being spent by those persons who are not putting their spare cash into war bonds and savings.

No. 1 on the list of things which persons with extra spending money are buying is more and finer clothing. House furnishings are second on the list. Third is more and better food. House improvements and repairs are fourth. Other items frequently mentioned are automobiles, real estate, jewelry, gifts, entertainment. A few frankly say, "Everything;" a few say they can now afford "to pay bills."

In the matter of surplus spending power, young people are far better off than older people. In fact, more than twice as many young people than people 50 years or over report having more money to spend than a year ago. This is shown in the following table:

By Age Groups
21 to 29 years	43%	57%
30 to 49 years	30	70
50 years and over	19	81

At the same time the extra cash is fairly evenly spread among all occupational groups, with the exception of professional and business men. Here is a table showing the replies by occupations:

By Occupations
Professional and business men	23%	77%
White collar	31	69
Skilled labor	30	70
Other labor	31	69
Farmers	30	70

Oil Issue May Go to Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

Secretary of Interior Ickes told Economic Stabilizer Fred M. Vinson yesterday that Vinson's turndown of a 35-cents-a-barrel increase in the price of crude oil "does not alter at all my conclusion" that the increase is necessary.

Ickes, as Petroleum Administrator, wrote Vinson that he hoped the decision would not discourage new oil field development at a time when greater production is badly needed.

Ralph K. Davies, Ickes' deputy in the Petroleum Administration for War, disclosed that Ickes is considering whether to appeal Vinson's decision. "We have the right to appeal to the President if necessary."

Davies read the letter to the National Conference of Petroleum Regulatory Officials here for a quarterly meeting.

Ickes wrote that in accordance with Vinson's instructions he will try again to discover some means of increasing the income of oil producers without raising the price (now about $1.18 a barrel), and that he would enlist the aid of the Petroleum Industry War Council in seeking such a device.

But at his press conference yesterday, Ickes had said flatly he did not think any such methods exist.

And Davies, although he asked the regulatory officials for suggestions on workable incentives for further development and discovery of oil fields, told them "we are not too optimistic" about the possibility of designing any alternatives to a price increase.

Both Davies and Ickes again discarded subsidies to oil producers as a practicable plan.

The State regulatory officials, who asked Vinson at the time of their last quarterly meeting to allow the price increase, likewise had not changed their minds yesterday.

Joseph L. McHugh, Louisiana conservation commissioner, said he was "sick about it" and he questioned whether the officials accomplished anything by coming to Washington.

OPA Warns Orange Dealers Of Ceilings

Alarmed by the recent trend to skyrocket prices for currently scarce oranges, the local OPA issued warnings to numerous dealers to stay within the ceiling prices fixed by the governmental agency, John L. Laskey, enforcement officer, said yesterday.

Laskey said that last month the OPA fixed prices of oranges in the city ranging from 26 to 93 cents a dozen. If purchased by the pound the prices range from 10 to 14 cents a pound for California ornages and from 7 to 10 cents a pound for Floridas.

However, in one store it was found that a price of 14 cents each was being asked for the big California Valencias.

Presenting a further gloomy picture of the orange market, yesterday, was the report of the daily market survey of the War Foods Administration which showed no carloads of the citrus fruit arriving in the city, other than California or Florida.

Dealers report that the California crop now is going largely into the big orange stage with the Valencias moving to market.

At the same time the first crop of Floridas should show improvement in quality as the season advances. However, the Government had announced its intention of taking almost half of the entire Florida crop for canning.

Hall Opposes Negotiable War Bonds

Edward B. Hall, assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, said yesterday plans are being laid for the fourth war loan drive to be held early in 1944 and that greater emphasis than ever would be placed on sales to individuals. He also indicated that the Treasury has no intention of changing the nonnegotiable terms of war bonds.

Hall intimated the Treasury was considering a campaign of individual sales to be followed by supplementary sales to nonbanking institutions such as insurance companies.

His address, prepared for delivery before the Investment Bankers Association meeting in New York, was in effect an indirect answer to comments of Association President Jay N. Whipple at Wednesday's session. Whipple urged more advance preparedness for war-loan drives and issuance of negotiable bonds in small denominations to individuals.

Hall said the Treasury had noted discussions of demand securities, but felt the present terms of issuance of Series E bonds—guaranteeing purchase price—were "an influence for financial calmness, confidence and peace of mind."

Hall emphasized that the present type of Series F bond, not salable on the open market, reduced pressure on the Government to stabilize the market for Federal securities.

"If negotiable bonds were sold to small investors in large amounts," Hall asserted, "the Government might be under pressure to maintain the entire market for high-grade securities (including those issued by private borrowers) in order to assure small investors against loss."

Two other advantages, he said, were that the low interest rate in the first few years would reduce interest cost to the Government if bonds were redeemed during that early period, and the increased interest of the latter half of the holding period provided an incentive against cashing in of bonds.

Southeastern Group Opposes NCHA Housing on New Sites

As National Capital Housing Authority officials stood their ground on all but one proposed low-cost housing projects in Southeast Washington yesterday, residents of that area reiterated their plea for confinement of such housing to sections already taken over by the Government, according to Joseph E. Deckman, chairman of the newly appointed housing committee of the Southeast Council of Citizens' Associations. He denied that the group opposes low-cost decelopments, but said their objections were based on location and questionable housing needs.

Deckman, who criticized NCHA disregard for Southeast citizens' views on developments in their area, protested public or private housing plans in virgin territory near the proposed Suitland Parkway as "ruining the natural development of Southeast in the postwar era." He charged that NCHA began projects without first consulting citizens' representative group.

If cheap emergency housing is confined to sections where previous developments have been set up, he asserted, the land will be free for extensive postwar building which would be "an asset to the city of Washington in realty values, tax revenue and appearance."

Under NCHA direction, however, grading has already begun on permanent low-cost projects in this vicinity.

Following a session of the Southeast Council Tuesday night, when two NCHA projects were opposed, John Ihlder, the authority's executive officer, disclosed Wednesday that one of the projects would be abandoned. Another site for 140 units for Negroes intended on the south side of Alabama ave., between 13th and 15th sts., will be selected, he stated.

But the other project opposed by the council, for war workers, on 2½ acres of land adjacent to Stanton School and bounded by 25th st., Alabama ave. and Naylor rd., will continue according to NCHA plans.

Questioning the necessity of this development, Deckman pointed out that the Stanton School area is already overcrowded, while there are at least 1000 vacancies for white war workers in projects already completed in Metropolitan Washington.

Fire Destroys Navy Blimp K-94; Eight Men Lost

Loss of the Blimp K-94 with her eight-man crew as a result of a fire was announced by the Navy yesterday. The craft was destroyed on a routine flight.

"It is known that the loss of this airship was not the result of enemy action," the Navy said.

A thorough search of the area in which the blimp went down was futile. No survivors were found. Those aboard:

Lieut. (j. g.) Wallace Abraham Wydeen, pilot, Minneapolis; Lieut. (j. g.) James W. Wagner, Akron, Ohio; Ensign Derl L. Schaftstall, Oskaloosa, Iowa; George F. Milla, Loss Angeles; William C. Speich, Saddle River, N. J.; Charles M. Djork, Denver, Colo.; Ralph H. McCathern, Sumpter, S. C.; Edward A. Weeden, Providence, R. I.

The Navy previously had announced loss of two blimps since the war started. One was destroyed in a collision, and the other was shot down at sea in a battle with a submarine.

UNABELLE GOES INTO BUSINESS. Unabelle Howard, now at the Casino Royal, has been captain of a dancing chorus for a couple of years, but she's also the owner-manager of the splendid new "line" at C. R. Their dances and costumes are alike in being crisply new and gay. It looks as though darkly lovely Unabelle knows her business. . . . The Casino Royal show is a whiz all the way from snappy little tapstress Arlena to the original antics of Bowen and Matthews. And Frank Garner and his bandsmen are getting zippier at every show.

Myles Hallett's band will open at El Patio on September 12 succeeding Adrian Rollino, who'll be off for a Key West vacation. Myles' crew closes at Cafe Caprice tomorrow after a stay of more than a year, will be followed there on Monday by Tommy Suiter's new orchestra.

"WASHINGTON AFTER DARK" provides one of the gayest moments in the new Balalaika revue. It shows a young Romeo scraping acquaintance via his guitar with a pretty girl in an adjoining window. Cats on the roof break up his serenade. . . . The Caucasian finale to the show is rife with Slavic zest and brilliance and baritone Slepouskin is in wonderful voice.

AN INDUCTION SKIT is the newest stunt of the fabulous Jackie Miles, now at Paul Young's. It's based on the real life experience of Jackie who's due to get into uniform in a few weeks . . . Contrasting with Jackie but equally fantastic is Ruth Petty, blonde parodist whom you've seen at the Earle and Capitol Theaters.

The weekend's star event is the opening of Justin Stone's band in the Victory Room tonight. Radio people claim the orchestra will be the next authentic sensation of the airlanes.

WARBLING ANGELS. Ray Marshall of Burt's Trans-Lux has a whooperoo of a new tune called "Bile That Cabbage Down." . . . Melisa, the cunning Latin of Restaurant "400," needs no memory courses. She recognized young Lafe Franklin from a four-generation picture of his family that appeared in a paper six month ago. . . . Reatha Stevens of Washie Bratcher's band will leave for New York and screen testing next week. . . . That lovely black-eyed person, Jean Lee, is the new singer in the Windsor Room. . . . Jerry and Georgia of the Anchor Room are the most romantic singing twosome you ever saw. . . . Randy Ryan, the Sinatra of Rocco Terrone's band at Treasure Island, has written a sweet song called "You'll Never Forget." . . . Music lovers at Ciro's are always insisting that Mary Pierson soprano a spot of opera for them. . . . Tony Lanasa of the Dubonnet Room is a graduate of the Peabody Conservatory of Music. . . . Bobby Rivera, handsome Cuban lad with Carlos Molina's band at Del Rio, sings entirely in Spanish. . . . Patsy Gallagher of Kavakos Grill is sweet in formals, but a complete knockout in sports get-ups, and the more informal they are, the better. . . . It's Ralph Menendez who does those fine Pan-Am vocals with Harold Nagel's band at the Carlton. . . . Lynn Allison is doing some rare items at Olmsted's Club—old French songs never previously heard in Washington.

Ruth Kennedy, pretty dancer at the Lotus, will soon be married to Lieut. William O'Connell of the Army Air Force.

EVELYN NESBIT, who was a famed glamour gal before the term was invented, will come to the Copocabana next Tuesday as hostess . . . The new Willie Leon band is tremendous, plays rumbas, paso dobles, sambas and tangos with the perfection demanded by the Copocabana's Pan-Am clientele.

FOR WEEKEND TRIPPING. Crossroads looks like a cross section of Washington on Saturday nights. The bar is six deep and the dance floor packed tighter than a rush hour bus . . . The Nightingale holds 600, but they look like 1000 on weekends. Tommy May's big 10-piece band. . . . River Bend, big, pleasant and homelike, has such a loyal patronage that it looks like one huge family. . . . La Conga, out on the Baltimore boulevard, is a prize spot for weekend fun hunters. Dave Crocker's band is what the customers ordered. . . . If you want to stay closer to your home base you'll find the Louisiana over in Georgetown bouncing with the rhythms of Ray King's big dance band.

Mississippi Governor Suffers Second Attack

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 4 (AP).—Gov. Paul B. Johnson suffered a second heart attack yesterday but his physicians took immediate remedial action and last reports were that the executive was resting quietly at his Hattiesburg home.

The second attack was termed less severe than the one the Governor suffered Tuesday morning.

CAN'T KEEP GRANDMA IN HER CHAIR
She's as Lively as a Youngster—Now her Backache is better
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The year was 1913 when the little team from South Bend, Ind., first came out of the West to play Army. Woodrow Wilson was in the first year of his Presidency. The Nation was still shuddering over the frightful disaster to the Titanic in its crash with an iceberg. There was scarcely a rumble of the World War to come.

POVICH

Heavyweight Champion Jack Johnson who had fled from the law in Chicago, was becoming a naturalized citizen of France. A young New Yorker named Franklin Delano Roosevelt had been named Assistant Secretary of the Navy. Charley Brickley's field goal kicking for Harvard was the hot football topic of the time. The police were having their hands full curbing speeders in the new-fangled horseless carriages. A White House order directed that roller towels in Government be discarded in favor of individual towels. There was peace in our time.

Notre Dame had been booked by Army as a "breather" for the big games to come. Clark Shaughnessy, in his Football in War And Peace, describes the game, delineates the events leading up to it. Football, he recalls, had never officially crossed the Alleghenies. It was a game played chiefly by the silk-stocking colleges of the East, by "the football crowd."

Army was regarding Notre Dame as "just a little college." A New York paper, reporting the coming game, referred to Notre Dame as a team from South Bend, Illinois. Little heed was paid by Army to the fact that it was a good little team that in four games had piled up 174 points to its opponents' four that season. Notre Dame was all set to surprise a complacent Army team that was just right to be surprised, relates Shaughnessy.

The little team from South Bend wasn't big, for fact, but it was superlatively fast. And it was bringing along a secret weapon—the forward pass. It was going to play the game that was going to revolutionize football that afternoon of November 2, 1913. It was to beat the bone-crushing strategy of Army with the forward pass as improved by Gus Dorais and Knute Rockne.

The forward pass wasn't new in football, but the way Dorais and Rockne were to use it was very new. There were only two ways to throw a pass to that time—the discus throw that cupped the ball between the hand and the wrist for a wobbly side-arm throw, and the under-hand heave that imparted a spin to it. Dorais found a third way.

He was a freshman on the Notre Dame campus when his coach, Shorty Longman discovered Dorais throwing the ball by grasping it on the end and heaving it over-hand, exactly like he used to do when he was a baseball pitcher. That was unheard of. 'That's pretty good, but it won't work with a wet ball," declared Lonergan. "It'll slip out of your hand." Dorais wouldn't agree. "Soak one in the water bucket and I'll show you," he said. Lonergan did and Dorais did. Then he demonstrated that he could throw a mud-covered ball, as well. And a new kind of forward pass was born.

Rockne was Dorais' room-mate at Notre Dame. During the next summer they got jobs in a restaurant at Cedar Point, Ohio, Rockne as a waiter and Dorais as a cashier. In the evenings they went to the beach and practiced a forward passing act. Just as Dorais had improved on throwing the ball, Rockne revolutionized the art of catching a pass. He discovered that he didn't have to catch the ball by gathering it to his breast in basket fashion. He could catch it with his hands, while running at full speed.

Everybody knows that the little team from South Bend beat Army 35 to 13, that November afternoon on the Hudson. The first touchdown was a Dorais-to-Rockne pass for 25 yards. Army's big team was helpless to stop Dorais' passing. West Point tied the score but Notre Dame came back up field for 85 yards to score again, chiefly on Dorais' passing. Passes led to or scored all of Notre Dame's five touchdowns that afternoon.

The Army team of that year was coached by Maj. Charles Daley, who had been an All-American at Harvard before entering West Point. Flashy as was the Notre Dame passing attack, Daly was not blinded by what he saw, Shaughnessy recalls. The West Point coach promptly began incorporating the best features of the air attack into his team's tactics. Later that year, Army beat a heavily-favored Navy team, 22 to 9. Thanks to the forward pass.

Army had learned its lesson well. Tomorrow at Yankee Stadium, it's Notre Dame vs. Army again, this time with no secret weapons, but with all that it takes, the odds-layers say.

Army-Irish Battle Expected To Develop Into Aerial Duel

By Harold Claassen

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Although Angelo Bertelli, Notre Dame's passing precisionist won't be present, you can be assured that there will be more aerials at the Irish-Army football game Saturday than there are rumors at an OPA meeting.

But that is as it should be on the thirtieth anniversary of the game in which a stub-nosed Notre Dame end named Knute Rockne and quarterback Gus Dorais popularized the forward pass by defeating a superior cadet eleven, 35 to 13.

That game was played at West Point with only a few spectators. Saturday's contest occupies New York huge Yankee Stadium and all of the 75,000 tickets have been sold for weeks.

As Accurate as Bertelli

Johnny Lujack, who took over Bertelli's job of quarterbacking the present Notre Dame squad when the latter left for advance Marine training, definitely will not play with his pitching armed strapped to his side. Midwesterners say Lujack is as accurate as Bertelli was, either on long or short passes.

And the youngster will be throwing to the same receivers who helped make Bertelli great.

Army, after romping through its first four games primarily on the running of Glenn Davis, turned to the air while defeating Yale, but forgot the aerials—both on offense and defense—in last Saturday's 13 to 13 deadlock with Pennsylvania.

Both Scores on Passes

Both of the Quaker markers came on tosses. On one of his few plays, at Philadelphia, Doug Kenna, of the Army, went far to one side before passing to a mate diagonally across the field on a formation that at first resembled an ordinary end run.

The Cadets have drilled this week in secret, but enough has leaked to indicate that Ed Refalko, a 6-foot 2-inch end who spends his winters playing basketball, is getting a lot of the coaches' attention as has Kenna, the Cadet back who has been out most of the season with a bad knee.

Col. MacPhail Sees Another Season For Major Leagues

Baltimore, Nov. 4 (AP).—Lieut. Col. Larry MacPhail, former general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, said today he expected that major league and "Double A" baseball would operate next year, "but beyond that I am not optimistic."

In an interview at Pimlico race track, MacPhail said, "The low minors really face tough sailing."

"Anyhow, if I were a ball club owner, I'd be going ahead with plans for next year. Baseball has its place, not only as the national game, but there's great civic pride and interest in a team and the servicemen follow the scores and major races closely. Washington is aware of all that."

Boucher, Vet Ranger Center, Returns to Game

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Frank Boucher, coach of the New York Rangers and one of hockey's great all-time centers, will return to active duty Saturday night he announced today. The Rangers, who lost their first three games of the National Hockey League season, open their home campaign against the Chicago Blackhawks Saturday.

Boucher, now 42 years old and out of the lineup since 1938, will center a line with Bill Gooden and Rookie Jack McDonald on the wings. He said he believed his experience as a play-maker would help the young players enough to justify his "comeback." Before his retirement, Boucher played 17 years of big-time hockey, 12 of them with the Rangers.

St. Michael's Defeats Longfellow, 35 to 7

St. Michael's eleven scored an impressive 35-7 victory over Longfellow School yesterday at Longfellow with Jimmy Colliton stealing the offensive thunder for the Saints. Colliton tallied three touchdowns, two from runs of 45 and 50-yards. Jimmy Hutchinson and Dooney Waldron each tallied once. Carr scored for Longfellow.

Redskins Now Expect Flock Of Trouble in Eagles' Nest

The Redskins will move into Philadelphia Sunday afternoon exceedingly wary of the opposition which happens to be the Phil-Pitt Steagles, a team with potentialities if not a glittering record.

Coach Dutch Bergman has at hand the perfect antidote for any attack of over-confidence the Redskins might be suffering because of their four straight victories and unbeaten record in the league. He need only point to what happened in Philadelphia last week.

Against the Chicago Cardinal team that held the Redskins to a 13-7 score and was threatening to bump the Redskins off throughout the last quarter, the Steagles ran wild, rolling up a 34-13 victory. The Steagles clicked off three touchdowns in the first 10 minutes against the Cardinal team that held the Redskins scoreless for a half.

The Steagles are playing the game with great zest this season, despite two defeats in their five league contests, and one of the most enthusiastic opponents the Redskins will encounter on Sunday is Roy Zimmerman, Steagle quarterback.

Zimmerman is now the bigshot back of the Steagles after being traded to that team early this year by the Redskins. He performed for three years as Sammy Baugh's understudy with the Redskins, always in the shadow of Baugh, and eager to play football with a team that would use his talents. He found that club in the Steagles.

The 6-foot-2-inch Zimmerman quarter backs the Steagles, does virtually all of the team's passing, and doubles as a ball carrier. He threw two touchdown passes against the Cardinals and kicked four extra points. He has found a favorite passing companion in Tony Bova, Steagle end.

The Redskins will be closer to their physical peak for Sunday's game than at any time this season, despite Andy Farkas' leg injury. Capt. Bob Masterson, on the sidelines for the past three weeks, is expected to see action at end against the Steagles.

Sammy Baugh will be shooting for additional forward passing records on Sunday and there is no indication that Coach Bergman will spart Sammy's throwing arm, inasmuch as the Cardinals found the Steagles vulnerable only in pass defense, scoring both of their touchdowns through the air.

ROY ZIMMERMAN

Va. Line-up Unsettled for Old Line Tilt

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 4.—Thirty Virginia football players have appeared in the starting lineups of the Cavaliers' five games this fall, and when Coach Frank Murray says he doesn't know just who will be started in the Maryland game here Saturday he means what he says.

Three centers, four guards, five tackles, four quarterbacks, three fullbacks and seven halfbacks have been in at the kickoff for the Cavaliers. Some of the starters in earlier games have been moved along by service orders, but most of them are in readiness to face Maryland at 2:30 o'clock Saturday.

All But Two Used

Coach Murray has also been using a larger number of players than usual in almost every game, and the number of Virginians in action reached a season high of 36 against VMI, when all but two of the men in the squad were put into the game. Two reserve linemen were held out because of minor injuries.

John MacDonald, 200-pound center, was the only new man to appear in the Cavalier's starting line against the Cadets. MacDonald, whose home is in Arizona, entered the university late for the first semester as a Navy V-12 trainee, and was held out of earlier games in order that he might concentrate on catching up his academic work.

Jimmy Miragliotta, the 144-pound center from Charleston, W. Va., has been alternating with the 50 pounds heavier MacDonald for the Cavalier varsity in practices.

Coach Murray has been trying several combinations of players in line and in backfield as preparations for playing Maryland have gone forward. And he will wait just before game time Saturday to make a final selection of his starters.

Getting Special Grooming

Jere Hanson, who was Archie Hahn's star sprinter on the track team last spring, has been getting special grooming as a ball carrier this week. Put into the VMI game for his second action of the season, the light-footed Hansen broke around end for 42 yards and a touchdown.

Jack Murray, only veteran back on the squad; Charlie Sackett, Lucien Burnett, Luke Waldrop, Allen Glay, Merle Debuskey, Phil James, and Armand Newmyer are other backs who may be in at the kickoff against Maryland.

These and other Virginia backs, Bob Finley, Jerold Euster, Benno Janasen, and newcomer Charlie Ellis have all been given a chance to show what they can do as forward passers or as hall carriers.

Dixie Walker Signed for 1944

Brooklyn, Nov. 4 (AP).—Dixie Walker, veteran Brooklyn Dodger outfielder, has signed a contract for the 1944 season, club President Branch Rickey said today. Terms were not revealed.

Owen Under Knife

St. Louis, Nov. 4 (AP).—Mickey Owen, Brooklyn Dodgers catcher, underwent an operation for appendicitis today. Dr. Robert F. Hyland said he came through the operation satisfactorily. Owen, formerly with the St. Louis Cardinals, arrived last night from his farm home near Springfield, Mo.

Navy Linemen Drilled Hard On Defense

Annapolis, Nov. 4 (AP).—With the hope of stopping the University of Pennsylvania's high scoring backfield, Navy football coach, Capt. John E. Whelchel today worked his linemen through heavy defensive drills in preparation for the game Saturday.

Having won five and lost only to Notre Dame, the Middies are striving to finish out the remainder of the 1943 gridiron season undefeated and thus go down in the record books as one of the greatest Navy teams in recent years.

The Tar line, which is composed of such stalwarts as Center Jack Martin, team Captain Al Channell at end, Tackles Ed Sprinkle and Don Whitmire and Guard Ben Chase, ran through heavy scrimmages against the reserve Navy forward walls in an effort to enter the Saturday fray in Philadelphia's Franklin Field in prime condition.

As the line held its workout, Navy Backfield Coach Keith Molesworth was presented with the problem—one that has been haunting the Navy for several weeks—of getting the injury jinx away from the environs of the Naval Academy gridiron.

Bob Jenkins, agile-footed wingback who was injured in the Duke-Navy game, had reported out for practice early in the week and Tar coaches had planned to use him in the Penn contest. However, his injury was somewhat aggravated today and the chances of his starting in the Quaker-Middie meeting is doubtful.

Irish, Penn Picked Over Army, Navy

By Caswell Adams

New York, Nov. 4 (INS).—Of course, the stand-out football game of the weekend will concern undefeated, untied and loudly acclaimed Notre Dame against undefeated, tied and slightly deflated Army at New York's Yankee Stadium, wherein 75,000 persons will watch, rain or shine, willy, nilly. And, rightly, Notre Dame is almost a 1-to-3 favorite to topple the Cadets and roar on through this peculiar season.

Notre Dame is thus favored despite the fact that its ace passer and thinker, Angelo Bertelli, has wandered from the South Bend campus to the confines of the Marine barracks at Parris Island. The Irish are figured to be so deep in reserves that even the loss of such a crackerjack as Bertelli will not keep them from rumbling over Army, without too much difficulty. Johnny Lujack will take Bertelli's place and he is almost as clever a faker in the T-formation and almost as accurate a passer.

Kenna Ready to Go

Army fell from the good graces of the experts by being tied by Pennsylvania in the Franklin Field mud last week. That day the Soldiers showed no pass defense experience at all, and given a dry ball, it is conceivable that Penn would have riddled the Army. But there's been a week since then, and Doug Kenna, the able Army back, has had just that much more time to mend his bad knee. The Cadets always come up for this game with Notre Dame and the guess here is that the margin will not be more than two touchdowns.

Michigan, beaten only by Notre Dame, tackles civilian Indiana this week, and here we pick the upset of the week. Michigan, since last week, has been riddled by Navy "graduations" and Bill Daley, the one-man team, is gone away. Therefore there's no reason not to expect the Hoosiers to hustle to beat the band against the Laddie Bucks from Ann Arbor. Indiana by a touchdown.

Quakers are Favored

Dartmouth ought to entertain Columbia, still to win a game, by shutting out Lou Little's young men. Pennsylvania, off the showing against Army, figures to whack Navy around, with a lot of help from magnificent Bob Odell. Texas Tech looks like the winner over TCU and Tulsa is a definite choice to bang Oklahoma A. and M. Purdue, the second ranking team in the country, will run Minnessota right out of the park, and Northwestern, much stronger than most believe, will stab Wisconsin repeatedly.

Sinkwich's Passes Come High, But Lions Are Satisfied

Detroit, Nov. 4 (AP).—It took "Fireball" Frankie Sinkwich seven games to get his first pro touchdown, and he's well down the National Football League list in individual achievement, but the Detroit Lions think the former Georgia all-America is all his college press agents said he was.

"We aren't the least disappointed in Frankie," declared Coach Gus Dorais today as he groomed his oft-beaten Lions for their last 1943 home game Sunday against the New York Giants. "Mayb his record doesn't look particularly good on paper, but he's working under not the most favorable conditions. We are satisfied."

Owner Mandel Agrees

Owner Fred L. Mandel, jr., who, at an estimated $1000 a game has paid $7000 for Sinkwich's lone touchdown, nodded assent.

A year ago flat-foot Frankie rolled up a record 2187 yards on land and through the air for Georgia, but he'll do well to hit the 1000-yard mark in 1943. With three games remaining, he has 701 yards, 509 on passes.

"We think Sinkwich is a real clutch player," added Dorais. "He's had his best games against the tough Chicago Bears, but I feel that his big game is still coming up."

For several weeks after he received a medical discharge from the Marines, Sinkwich was used sparingly. Last Sunday he started for the first time and now may be expected to see more action.

How about Frankie's passing? In 1942 he had seven interceptions all season, and now he has 14 in 7 games, including a league record seven by the Green Bay Packers a fortnight ago.

"Sinkwich operated at Georgia behind a big, tough line that gave him air-tight protection," replied Dorais. "Unfortunately, we aren't in the position to keep those hard-rushing pro linemen away long enough to give Frankie a chance. But I've never heard him utter one word of complaint about his protection. He knows we are doing our best to help him."

Colt-Viking Game Tops Schoolboy Slate

Seven games, including two interhigh series tussles, are scheduled for busy schoolboy gridders today. Two more contests are booked tomorrow.

The interhigh series pair of games will send neighborhood rivals at each other's throats when Coolidge, seeking its fifth straight victory, invades Central Stadium for a battle with the Vikings, and Anacostia moves into Eastern's stronghold for a tiff with the Ramblers.

Competing with the pair of series entanglements will be the St. John's-Roosevelt brush at Roosevelt, big game of the year so far for the Cadets.

Coolidge, current interhigh leader, will reply on its ace passing combination of Pitcher Johnny Shullenbarger to Catcher Addie Bassin to turn back the Vikings, in a game which heavily favors the Colts. Central, which has never found itself this year, will present a juggled line-up, with Coach John Jankowski determined to forget this year and prepare for next by using, for the most part, only players who will return in '44.

Eastern's Gordon Ailing

Eastern, which must subdue the passing of "Flea" Flaherty and the running of Tom Yahares to win, may not be able to counter with its best ball carrier, Bob Gordon, who is still nursing an injured ankle. The transition of Ed Nicholson from end to blocking back, has helped the Ramblers, as their recent 18-6 upset of Wilson will testify.

St. John's, which may not have the services of Tommy Hook, regular fullback, who is nursing a weak ankle, also will be without Joe Donnelly, first string guard, who has a knee injury. A ray of sunshine, however, shone on the Cadets yesterday when it was announced that Bob Rill, another crack guard, was sufficiently recovered from his knee hurt to play and that Emmett Pacetti, regular end, was recovered from his cracked ribs and would be available.

Should Hook be unable to play, Johnny Bowman will start, augmented with George Hughes, triple-threat halfback; Andy Hayden at the other halfback spot and Jim McNamara, jr., at quarter. Roosevelt is expected to be at full strength.

The Rest of the Schedule

Other games today find Tech invading Washington and Lee's bailiwick at Ballston; St. Albans visiting Georgetown Prep; George Washington High of Alexandria journeying to Richmond to meet John Marshall and Landon visiting Middleton, Del., for an I. A. C. brush with St. Andrews.

Tomorrow's "spot" game at Central Stadium will see Wilson and Western, each battling to preserve an outside chance of winning the Interhigh series, by eliminating the other. This game is also scheduled for 3:45 p. m.

Other games tomorrow find Mount Vernon meeting Fairfax High at Fairfax and Alexandria Episcopal facing Virginia Episcopal at Lynchburg.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE
Coolidge at Central (Interhigh Series), 3:45.
Anacostia at Eastern (Interhigh Series), 3:45.
St. John's at Roosevelt, 3:45.
Tech at Washington and Lee, 3:45.
St. Albans at Georgetown Prep, 3:30.
George Washington High at John Marshall, Richmond.
Landon at St. Andrews, Middleton, Del.

TOMORROW'S SCHEDULE
Wilson vs. Western at Central Stadium, 3:45.
Mount Vernon at Fairfax.

Okeson, Dean Of Collegiate Athletics, Dies

Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 4 (AP).—Walter R. Okeson, chairman of the football rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, who was known as the "Czar of College Football," died today after a long illness. He was 68.

Okeson was vice president and treasurer of Lehigh University and formerly was commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Association. He played for Lehigh in the 1890's and served as a volunteer football coach at the university from 1896 to 1915.

Okeson formulated many of the rules now in use in intercollegiate grid play.

In 1924 he helped to organize the Eastern Association of football officials, supported by 10 leading Eastern universities. He was named commissioner of the Intercollegiate Association in 1927 and served until 1938.

He was a Lehigh alumni secretary from 1917 to 1923, when he became secretary and treasurer of the university board. He was named vice president in 1930.

A native of Fort Royal, Pa., he attended Moravian Preparatory School and the Shortledge Academy at Media, Pa. He was married twice. Both wives died.

Tuttle Resigns PCL Presidency

Los Angeles, Nov. 4 (AP).—W. C. Tuttle has resigned as president of the Pacific Coast Baseball League, a position he has held eight years.

His resignation, effective November 15, was contained in letters to presidents of the eight Coast League clubs, constituting the league's board of directors. Tuttle, reported to be on a hunting trip, was not available for comment on the reason for his resignation.

In San Diego, Maj. Charles Lott, the league's first vice president, voiced surprise at the resignation.

"The league meetings this year were tranquil," said Lott, "and no pressure was brought regarding the presidency."

Gus Dorazio, Philadelphia Italian, and big Al Hart, 225-pound Army War College Negro soldier, resume their heavyweight war tonight at Uline Arena in what promises to be one of the most bruising battles Washington has witnessed since nose punching was legalized here some nine years ago.

The last time these two clashed, Dorazio was given a decision many thought was unjustified. Gus punched out an early lead and then, just when it seemed he would win as he pleased, Hart came out of his shell, took the bit in his teeth, and in a last three-round splurge nearly pulled out with a victory. Only Dorazio's early lead saved him. Hart, disappointed at having his string of 24 straight without a defeat snapped, claimed he would have kayoed the tough Philadelphia in another round or two. Many agreed with him.

Hart Will Get His Chance

Tonight he gets his chance. The battle is listed for a distance of 12 rounds, two more than their previous battle. Which is what Hart wants, as he asked Promoter Goldie Ahearn to schedule the return go for 15 rounds. Dorazio wanted 10 and they compromised on 12.

Dorazio, ever the consistent and hard body puncher, again plans to go after Hart's mid-section. Recently recovered from ar attack of grippe, which forced him to postpone a long-awaited shot at Jimmy Bivins here, Gus, trainer, the veteran Jimmy Wilson, pronounces Dorazio in the finest shape of his career. Gus will weigh in at around 196 pounds, four less than the 200½ he weighed for Hart last time, some six weeks ago.

Hart, training faithfully as always, is down around 222 and plans to enter the ring around that figure, give or take a pound. The big Negro's strategy this time will be to force the fight from the outset, as he did in the final three rounds of their last bout. He hopes to get out on top and stay there all the way.

Real Brawl in Prospect

Witt Hart apparently disregarding a defensive style of fighting and planning to force the issue, indications point to a bar-room brawl. Dorazio knows only one style of fighting—boring in at all times, doing the leading, and using the vicious left hook to the body that saw him master such fighters as Bob Pastor, Tami Mauriello and others. It should be a double case of legal assault and battery.

Awaiting the winner is a possible shot at "Turkey" Thompson, sensational West Coast knockout artist; Lee Q. Murray, rising Connecticut scrapper or Joe Baksi, Wilkes-Barre fighter, who has split a pair of decisions with Dorazio. Ahearn has all three under contract for a future bout here, he has already announced.

The two boys come pretty close to being a perfect example of the old expression, "Two minds with a single thought."

Yesterday Hart said:
"I'll knock him out."
Dorazio said:
"I'll knock him out."

There doesn't appear to be much choice there, but the local betting gentry say five will get you eight if you think Hart will win.

Four supporting numbers of five rounds each are to round out the card. These bouts offer Sailor Eddie White vs. Otis Harris; George Kostalac vs. Abner Powell; Jackie Goodman vs. Bee Bee Washington, and Vic Creelman vs. Billy Bates.

Quien Es Captures Janney 'Cap at Pimlico

Cape Cod Second to Favorite

By Walter Haight

Pimlico, Nov. 4.—Calumet Farm, leading money-winning stable of 1943, added another handicap and $4590 in earnings today when Quien Es, a fleet son of Hygro, won the $5000 added Janney Handicap, a 6-furlong test inaugurated here in 1933. Ridden by Jockey Bert Thompson, Quien Es stepped to the wire three lengths in advance of the unpredictable G. C. Greer's Cape Cod. A half length farther back came Woolford Warm's Adulator. Three others competed.

Quien Es, with two victories here to his credit, was no stranger to the crowd of 12,000 and was made the favorite in the fleet field. He paid $5.30 and was clocked in 1:13 2-5 for the three-quarters over a drying-out track which reached a "good" condition under the bright sky.

True North in Lead

True North, representing the Howe Stable, was first to show in front on the outside after the opening jumps. Sollure was close up and drove to the pacemaker approaching the stretch. Getting into the straightaway Sollure displaced the tiring True North and Quien Es, reserved in third position to this stage, was then roused and went on to dispose of Sollure. In the closing 70 yards Quien Es was racing easily when Cape Cod came from last to stage a final bold bid.

Greentree Stable, second leading money-winning outfit, took the day's secondary feature, the November Purse. Famous Victory, well handled by Jockey Conn McCreary, came from last position to win by four lengths in the role of a $4.10 favorite. Glenn Riddle Farm's Soldier Song was second and two lengths in front of Max Marmorstein's Chaldon Heath. Famous Victory stepped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:47 2-5.

Public Choices Score

Favorite players in the crowd had a banner day. Amazed in the third race, Old River in the fourth and Blue Sash in the fifth were some of the other successful public choices.

The card was without a steeplechase. Daily double players who cashed collected at the rate of $36.60 when Post Haste won the first race and Fogoso took the second.

What's the story? . . . I mean what are Maryland tracks going to do about war relief? . . . Those two open days Monday and Tuesday between this meeting and Marlboro might be used . . . Alorter will not race again this season but has recovered from an attack of fever . . . The American Trainers Association will hold its annual meeting Monday after the races . . . By the way, the Maryland Turf Writers will stage their annual dinner at the Lord Baltimore Hotel next Wednesday night . . . Members are selling tickets . . . James F. Sager, sponsor of the famous Sager Purse, made his semi-annual visit to the track today . . . The Greentree farm has retired The Rhymer to the stud and the 5-year-old is being shipped to Kentucky . . . He won the Widener Cup and other stakes but never was too sound . . . Arch McDonald, the horse, has undergone an operation destined to send him back to the races next season ready to run. Sidney Jacobs arrived from New York with Stymie, a Thomas K. Lynch Memorial Handicap candidate.

Black Badge Scores Again At Jamaica

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., Nov. 4 (AP).—Black Badge, which won one section of the divided Remsen Handicap over this strip in mid-October, sped to a 5-length triumph in the Hornet Handicap before 14,461 fans who came out for the opening of the nine-day victory meeting this afternoon.

Favorite in the field of a half dozen 2-year-olds at odds of 6 to 5 and carrying top weight of 120 pounds, the black son of Cohort—Pennant Girl covered 6 furlongs of slow going in 1:13 flat, giving veteran Jockey Wayne Wright his second score on the card. Closest to Abe Hirschberg's black colt at the wire was A. W. Wentzel's Freezout, which beat Wheatley's Irish Tar by a length and a half for the place. Black Badge, first winning choice on the program, earned a purse of $3370.

This extra meeting, jointly sponsored by New York's five tracks and under the auspices of the Turf Committee of America, is expected to yield some half-million dollars, which will be distributed to war relief and charitable organizations. Fifty per cent will go to National War Fund, Inc.

Freezout, a recent winner, was first away in the feature. Tintagel's son led Irish Tar with a length to spare until the field reached the home turn. Black Badge, which had been following that pair and Great Ripple, suddenly shot to the front as they began the run through the front lane. He pulled away with ease while giving Freezout 11 pounds and a decisive licking.

Steinbeck Discovers Why Soldiers Don't Talk About Battles—They Just Can't Remember

By John Steinbeck

Who has just returned to the United States from an assignment as a war correspondent in Great Britain and the Mediterranean area.

During the years between the last war and this one, I was always puzzled by the reticence of former soldiers about their experiences in battle. If they had been reticent men it would have been different, but some of them were talkers and some were even boasters. They would discuss their experiences right up to the time of battle and then suddenly they wouldn't talk any more. This was considered heroic in them. It was thought that what they had seen or done was so horrible that they didn't want to bring it back to haunt them or their listeners. But many of these men had no such consideration in any other field and this problem bothered me.

Only recently have I found what seems to be a reasonable explanation, and the answer is simple. They did not and do not remember—and the worse the battle was, the less they remember.

In all kinds of combat the whole body is battered by emotion. The ductless glands pour their fluids into the system to make it able to stand up to the great demand on it. Fear and ferocity are products of the same fluid. Fatigue toxins poison the system. Hunger followed by wolfed food distorts the metabolic pattern already distorted by adrenalin and fatigue. The body and the mind so disturbed are really ill and fevered. But in addition to these ills, which come from the inside of a man and are given him so that he can temporarily withstand pressures beyond his ordinary ability, there is the further stress of explosion.

Under extended bombardment or bombing the nerve ends are literally beaten. The ear drums are tortured by blast and the eyes ache from the constant hammering.

This is how you feel after a few days of constant firing. Your skin feels thick and insensitive. There is a salty taste in your mouth. A hard, painful knot is in your stomach where the food is undigested. Your eyes do not pick up much detail and the sharp outlines of objects are slightly blurred. Everything looks a little unreal. When you walk, your feet hardly seem to touch the ground and there is a floaty feeling all over your body. Even the time sense seems to be changed. Men who are really moving at a normal pace seem to take forever to pass a given point and when you move it seems to you that you are very much slowed down, although actually you are probably moving more quickly than you normally do.

Under the blast your eyeballs are so beaten that the earth and the air seem to shudder. At first your ears hurt, but then they become dull and all your other senses become dull, too. There are exceptions, of course. Some men cannot protect themselves this way and they break, and they are probably the ones we call shellshock cases.

In the dullness all kinds of emphases change. Even the instinct for self-preservation is dulled so that a man may do things which are called heroic when actually his whole fabric of reaction is changed. The whole world becomes unreal. You laugh at things which are not ordinarily funny and you become enraged at trifles. During this time a kind man is capable of great cruelties and a timid man of great bravery, and nearly all men of resistance to stresses beyond their ordinary ability.

Then sleep can come without warning and like a drug. Gradually your whole body seems to be packed in cotton. All the main nerve trunks are deadened, and out of the battered cortex curious dream-like thoughts emerge. It is at this time that many men see visions. The eyes fasten on a cloud and the tired brain makes a face of it, or an angel or a demon. And out of the hammered brain strange memories are jolted loose, scenes and words and people forgotten, but stored in the back of the brain. These may not be important things, but they come back with startling clarity into the awareness that is turning away from reality. And these memories are almost visions.

And then it is over. You can't hear, but there is a rushing sound in your ears. And you want sleep more than anything, but when you do sleep you are dream-ridden, your mind is uneasy and crowded with figures. The anesthesia your body has given you to protect you is beginning to wear off, and, as with most anesthesia, it is a little painful.

And when you wake up and think back to the things that happened they are already becoming dreamlike. Then it is not unusual that you are frightened and ill. You try to remember what it was like, and you can't quite manage it. The outlines in your memory are vague. The next day the memory slips farther, and a dream slips away until very little is left at all. A woman is said to feel the same way when she tries to remember what childbirth was like.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Funds to Centralize Records Approved

Only a few dollars—in comparison with the amounts asked—were approved by the House Appropriations Committee when it reported a deficiency bill yesterday but it did give the Civil Service Commission funds to centralize the personnel and retirement records of Federal employes. This project, hailed by the committee, will eliminate the jobs of 1429 employes and save the taxpayers $2,293,800. Each agency now maintains these records at a cost of three million annually and 1800 employes. The commission said it could do the job with 371 employes at an annual cost of $706,200 and the committee patted it on the back and said fine, go ahead. The plan was sponsored jointly by the commission and the Budget Bureau. War must reduce its personnel office by 500 employes and Navy by 300 when the centralization takes place.

KLUTTZ

The committee had cautious words to say about overstaffing in Government and it served notice that funds will be cut unless administrators correct the condition. No one, the committee said, is able to say that there is a definite percentage of excess personnel but, it added, most responsible officials are willing to admit that there is some overstaffing. The committee was referring to Civil Service Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming and Budget Director Harold Smith, who were quizzed in detail about overstaffing. It said Flemming had put his finger on the problem when he said, in effect, that overstaffing resulted from poor supervision. Congress, the committee said, doesn't want to hinder the war by making arbitrary cuts, but it warned they will come unless administrators weed out the idle offices.

100,000 to Go

Another 100,000 employes will be cut from the Federal payroll between now and the end of the year, the committee predicted. The committee gave Harold Smith half the money he asked for to make more detailed investigation of personnel. Under the Overtime Pay Act, the Budget Bureau must fix personnel ceiling for Federal agencies every 90 days, and Smith said he planned to get a lot tougher with the agencies when he was given funds for an additional staff. Turnover in the Federal service this year will reach another tremendous figure. In July, August and September, 538,000 placement were made, or an annual basis of 2,100,000. The commission hopes it can be held down to 1,920,000, or an annual turnover rate of 6 per cent.

Civil Aeronautics Administration was denied $325,000 to raise salaries of 2000 field employes. Officials say it's just about impossible to hold their people with all the offers of higher salaries they get. . . . Census Bureau, however, was given $175,000 to raise the salaries of employes the Civil Service Commission has reclassified. . . But the committee again slapped down the Employment Service by refusing it funds to raise the salaries of field employes to the Federal level. The employes are now paid salaries fixed by the States, but they must work in offices with unemployment compensation people who get Federal level salaries. The committee did allow $1,584,000 to meet increases recently given by the States.

Estimated to save from 40 to 50 million dollars a year, War Shipping Administration was given $2,350,000 to hire a staff of 1500 examiners to check material and labor costs on ships under repair. WSA asked for 5000 examiners . . . National Labor Relations Board asked for $300,000 to hire 133 people to enforce the Smith-Connally Act. It was given $75,000 . . . Agriculture was given $15,000 to make experiments designed to adapt the Army "jeep" for farm use . . . The committee approved funds for Solid Fuels to pay personnel and activities taken over from the new abolished Bituminous Coal Division . . . Bureau of Mint will be able to produce about 700 million coins this year under its revised estimate.

Farm Security Administration was walloped over the head again by the committee. It wasn't given a cent and it must fire more than 5000 employes very soon unless more money is forthcoming. And it might be. Insiders say the funds weren't allowed because of a jurisdictional dispute within the committee. Representative Tarver, chairman of the Agriculture Subcommittee, insisted that his group, and not the deficiency subcommittee, should handle any request for additional money. It's possible that Tarver's group will take action on the request or that the Senate will give FSA some money. Meantime, many of the key people are leaving FSA. Joe Scott, Oklahoma commissioner of agriculture, is the latest person to have refused the top job in FSA. Now, it's reported, the job will be offered to former Representative Frank Hancock of North Carolina. Hancock, it's said, is the candidate of Representative Cooley of North Carolina, who is chairman of a House committee that's investigating FSA.

Hospitals Hail Extra Food Points

Superintendents and dietitians of Washington hospitals welcomed the announcement by OPA yesterday that additional ration points for canned and processed foods will be released to institutions caring for sick and disabled persons.

The grant of points, over and above regular hospital allotments, is planned by OPA to enable building of "emergency larders." But as matters stand—and apparently have stood since food rationing began—they will come in very handy to meet existing shortages.

OPA acknowledged yesterday that local supply difficulties made the move advisable, since hospitals must stock food in quantities, and officials interviewed backed this analysis of the situation.

"I was wondering what we would do when fresh greens go off the market," Chief Dietitian Alice Lattson of Children's Hospital declared. "It certainly is good news."

Superintendent Elizabeth Rodgers of Casualty Hospital felt that even if the extra allotment would not permit building of a reserve, it would fill the gaps in the hospital storeroom.

John A. Lindner, director of Doctors Hospital, welcomed the news as a means of "lightening the burden," but pointed out that OPA has done a "thoroughly good job" in supplying adequate ration points to hospitals, and "we've been managing on what we had," he said.

Fresh fruits and vegetables, scarce and expensive during cold weather, have been the principal concern of most institutions unable to meet demands with previous allowances. "The added points will be a godsend," accprding to Rowena Roberts, dietitian at Sibley.

Golf Course Control Kept By Interior

The question of whether the District Recreation Board would operate the public golf courses was left unanswered yesterday after members said they had been advised by an official of the Interior Department, which has jurisdiction over the parks, that the department intends to retain control.

The golf courses previously have been leased to a concessionarie by the Interior Department. Recreation Board members said that under their interpretation of a recent act of Congress, they were authorized to take over and operate the public courses.

Interior Department officials agreed to permit the Recreation Board to operate the courses, but with the proviso that the department would retain the power to nullify any action by the recreation department.

Another edict of the Interior Department which Recreation Board members resented was that which would bring the courses and facilities under National Capital Park and Planning Commission designation.

The matter came to a head yesterday during a meeting of the Recreation Board committee on contracts which had been called to discuss a letter from Oscar L. Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, in which he advised them the department would not accept any action taken by the committee.

It was pointed out that the contract by which the courses had been operated by a private individual had expired and new arrangements were now in order.

500 Nebraskans Attend Opening Dance of Season

Father Edward J. Flanagan, tired from lengthy interviews and preparations for the benefit football game Sunday between his famed Boys Town team and Gonzaga High School, welcomed the gathering and urged wide attendance at the game.

Speaking to reporters after the dance, the dean of Boys Town declared that just so long as there are delinquent parents, "who refuse to recognize God in their daily life," there will be delinquent children. He said that in his opinion 60 per cent of servicemen contracting veneral disease got it from associtaion with young girls from 12 to 16 years of age. Parental responsibility in such cases is clear, he said.

No Man's Land

This Is What's Happened to A Man's Work

Add to your wartime vocabulary the catchy phrase, "fe-mailman," as introduced yesterday by Mrs. Marion Blaisdell of Silver Spring. Doing a man's job is nothing new to the Army "widow," who a few years ago qualified as one of the country's few lady steeplejacks. She came down to earth yesterday and began delivering mail to nearby homes.

Manpower shortages notwithstanding, postal authorities muttered, "Are you kidding?" when Mrs. Blaisdell applied for a job as mail carrier. But Mrs. Blaisdell wasn't and insisted that all-day hiking and adverse weather wouldn't stop her. She was nursing a pair of slightly sore feet at the end of her day yesterday, but she was prepared for that.

Given a choice between housewifing and operating a Capital Transit Co. streetcar, Mrs. Mary DeBoard oof445 Irving st. ne., will keep picking up passengers along 14th st. for the duration and six. "You meet such interesting people," according to Mrs. DeBoard, who has held the job for a month, "and it's really fun."

When the aluminum of her frying pans went into dials for war weapons, Mrs. Ruth Hoofring learned how to cut them at a 14-inch lathe in the Washington Navy Yard. A housewife, she'd never worked in a factory before war was declared, but she wanted to match the effort of her husband, Charles Hoofring, who also works in a Navy Yard machine shop.

Moves Gain to Compensate Charwomen for Deductions

Eighty Bureau of Printing and Engraving charwomen, threatened last summer with an order to repay excess wages erroneously paid to them, today will move another stride closer to reprieve as the House Claims Committee reports out a bill to make compensation for deductions.

The bill is identical to a measure reported favorably by Senator Ellender of the Senate Claims Committee on Wednesday. Under its provisions any deductions already made from pay checks are to be reimbursed but other employes, whose salaries were paid correctly, would not be granted an equal amount.

The error was discovered last June by the General Accounting Office, which said that it occurred when the pay rate for bureau employes was changed to give them the same wage for a 40-hour week as for 48 hours.

The charwomen affected were notified late in July that they would have to make up for the clerical mistake, which granted them 78 cents an hour instead of the authorized 65 cents per hour for nearly a year, by deductions from their meager pay checks.

Following disclosure of their plight in The Post, dozens of readers and staff members contributed money from their own pockets to make up the deficit. All funds were returned to donors, however, when the Treasury revealed that no further deductions would be made until Congress had time to act.

Greek Admiral Here Sees Need Of Providing Food for Nation

The reestablishment of the Greek nation can best be accomplished through a six months' feeding period followed by an election to determine what type of government is desired; this will help to formulate a lasting peace and just order through the creation of a new Balkan entente, Admiral Alexander Sakellariou, commander in chief of the Greek navy, said yesterday.

Claiming that Italy's expansion plans predated the Fascist period with regard to Greece, he said his country desires to regain "such natural borders" after the war as will protect the nation against future aggression.

Admiral Sakellariou, who was vice premier and minister of the navy in the cabinet that fled Greece after the Nazi occupation, recalled that Albania and Bulgaria were the only Balkan states which did not belong to the Balkan entente before the war.

Here on a special mission of the government of King George, the ranking officer of the Greek navy declared that "no one today can claim to represent the Greek people."

The admiral, who has served his country since 1902, last year was made a Knight Commander of the Bath by the British.

Admiral Sakellariou said that he was the last cabinet member to leave Greece just one day before the Nazis entered Athens. He went from there to Crete and finally established his headquarters in Cairo, Egypt, where he remained in charge of the Greek navy until April of this year.

ADMIRAL SAKELLARIOU

Although no Greek ship surrendered or fell into the hands of the enemy, the admiral said, almost 50 per cent of the fleet was lost in action. Replacements furnished by the British, he added, have brought it to its former strength.

Grand Jurors Start Probe Of Gallinger

The District grand jury investigation of Gallinger Hospital began yesterday with opening statements by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly and Police Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon.

Fihelly disclosed later that the complete investigation of the United States Attorney's office has been turned over to the District Commissioners for whatever administrative action they may wish to take.

The grand jury will resume investigation of the case Wednesday, and will probe the possibility of misappropriation of hospital funds and supplies. After this matter is disposed of, the grand jury will go into evidence of alleged mistreatment of inmates at the institution, Fihelly said.

Dr. Edgar L. Bocock, hospital superintendent will not be among the first witnesses called, Fihelly said, adding that first will be taken up the cases of Waldo H. Kuhn, superintendent of grounds, residing at 1955 S st. se.; Arthur Files, laundry foreman, of 3333 Baker st. ne.; Charles West, pharmacist, of 324 17th st. ne.; James R. Gardiner, property and supplies officer, who resides at the hospital, and Clarence Campbell, former employe, of 1204 Matthew pl. nw.

The investigation grew out of a General Accounting Office report and a subsequent investigation by a House District Subcommittee which asked for the removal of Dr. Bocock and four others.

After next Wednesday's hearings, the grand jury will resume on November 13, with hearings to continue through the following week and possibly longer, Fihelly said. He indicated that should the evidence warrant it, he might call a special grand jury, but added "we don't really have enough for that."

Mrs. Meyer to Tell Social Agencies of Tour of England

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, newspaperwoman and wife of the editor and publisher of The Washington Post, will speak about her observations of the effects of war on children in England and in this country at the first fall meeting of the Council of Social Agencies Monday at 12 noon at the YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw.

John Ihlder, president of the board of directors, will preside.

Applications for council membership by the Day Care Office of D. C. Services to Children of Working Mothers and the headquarters section, Army Air Forces Branch of Army Emergency Relief, will be considered at the meeting. Preliminary approval of their applications has already been granted by the board of directors, it was said.

Block Leader Drive for 15,000 To Start Soon

The Civilian War Services branch of the District Government yesterday completed plans for a city-wide drive to recruit the 15,000 block leaders who will form the backbone for various civilian war agencies here.

The two-weeks between November 15 and December 1 have been designated the recruitment period, when a huge publicity campaign to put the drive over will be promoted by Washington radio stations, department stores, motion pictures theaters and other widely frequented places in the city.

Planning and coordination of the campaign will be worked out by a publicity committee, members of which were announced yesterday by Harry P. Somerville, executive officer of Civilian War Services.

Large Group Named

Chairman of the committee is Ray Bell, director of public relations for Pennsylvania Central Airlines; Bryson Rasch of Station WMAL has been named vice chairman and chairman of the radio subcommittee; Eleanor Dagges, advertising director of Palais Royal Department Store, is chairman of the department store subcommittee and Frank La Falce, advertising director of the Warner Brothers Theaters, chairman of the motion picture theaters committee.

Other members named to the publicity committee include: Bob Dougan, executive officer of the Capital Transit Company; Robert Lewis, advertising manager of the Washington Gas Light Company; James Rotto, advertising director of the Hecht Co.; Henry Voss, advertising director of Lansburgh's; James Hardy, advertising director of Woodward and Lothrop; Robert Davidson, of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. and Kirk Miller of the Safeway Stores.

Forty community chairmen of the 66 needed to direct war service activities in Washington's 66 zones have already been selected, and qualified volunteers for the remaining vacancies are asked to call Executive 5440, Extension 43. Persons who know their neighborhoods well and have familiarized themselves with their day-to-day wartime needs would make ideal community chairmen, according to publicity director Bell.

Variety of Duties

The problems demanding major attention in this city—and in the solution of which every householder in the city eventually will be asked to take part—are: care and maintenance of children of working mothers, pooling of transportation facilities through an effective car-sharing program; a victory garden campaign to relieve possible foods and nutrition shortages; a canvas of available full and part-time workers for vital industries and services here; and recruitment of WACs.

It's Simple Toil

Bees Wax Smart In The Winter

This, for better or worse, is a story with a moral.

Sophistication is what is wrong with this modern life—not the maelstrom of Washington, nor the crowds, nor the loneliness—it's the failure to appreciate the finer, simpler things.

The Post's correspondent in Leonardtown, Md., has been endowed with the great gift to see this solemn truth. She writes as follows:

By Grace W. Knight

Leonardtown, Nov. 4.—If no one else can find rooms and and houses in Leonardtown, leave it to bees and they will find a place every time.

High above the passing traffic and the booming of the church bells, in the heart of the old wooden cross atop the St. Aloysius' Catholic Church here, in Leonardtown, the bees have found it an excellent place to honeycomb and take refuge in. Come hell and high water, the bees buzz; they are safe.

All summer the bees have worked and filled the old cross' seams to bursting proportions with the toil of their labor, and it's full of sweet honey that they expect to live on this winter. Regardless of ration points and the price of war food, they are O. K.

And better still, they are so high up, few can reach or attempt to reach them only at the great risk of their own life, and it's perfectly certain few if any will attempt it, for churches in olden times were the places of sanctuary for humans, and the bees feel it should be for nature's children.

Overton Willing To Back District Vote Amendment

Junior Board of Commerce Group Hits McCarran Bill

Opposition to the McCarran home rule bill will be recommended to the Junior Board of Commerce by its special investigating committee, it was learned last night. When the organization will act on the report was not made known.

Winfield Weitzel, president of the board, said the membership is expected to concur in the findings of the committee, which was headed by Attorney A. P. Crenshaw. The opposition was based on the fact the McCarran bill does not give the District national representation.

"The Junior Board of Commerce will not take affirmative action on Senator McCarran's plan because it will not, if passed, give us national representation. That is what we want," said Weitzel.

"Further, we have no assurance the bill will give a better form of government than now exists under the three commissioner plan.

"An increase in the number of commissioners to seven, as provided by the bill pending, is not any guarantee that the District would be better governed than it is now."

Similar action was taken recently by the Washington Board of Trade at its first fall meeting.

At present the McCarran bill is in the Senate District Committee and there is not any indication it is due for an early hearing.

In Elections For President, Vice President

By Anne Hagner

Amending his recent declaration that he would support no bill granting home rule to District residents, Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana yesterday asserted that he would not oppose a constitutional amendment giving Washingtonians the right to vote in national elections.

Overton stated that he saw no reason why Capital citizens should not be able to vote for President and Vice President, but pointed out that he would not favor the granting of statehood or its equivalent to the city, which thus would give it fullfledged Senators and Representatives in Congress.

He emphasized to reporters that his recent outspoken opposition to "any bill" proposing home rule did not mean that he was against a constitutional amendment bestowing franchise in national elections.

Two Now Before Committee

The home-rule measures at present before the Senate District Committees, on which hearings begin November 30, are:

1. Senator McCarran's carefully prepared bill giving Washingtonians power to elect a seven-man Board of Commissioners, who, in turn, would appoint a city manager; and

2. Senator Holman's resolution setting up election machinery for a charter commission by which local citizens could choose their own form of administration.

Another resolution simplifying Holman's original measure, by placing selection of a charter in the hands of a three-man commission appointed by the President and the chairman of the Senate and House District Committees, is in the hands of legislative drafting clerks and may be ready for introduction within the next few days.

Provision of Amendment

The Capper-Sumners constitutional amendment pending before Congress would add to the Constitution:

"The Congress shall have power to provide that there shall be in the Congress and among the electors of President and Vice President members elected by the people of the District constituting the seat of the Government of the United States, in such numbers and with such powers as the Congress shall determine."

3 D. C. Clerics Agree Esquire Jokes Are Too Sexy for Public

A Protestant minister, a Catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi and an assistant superintendent of Washington schools yesterday testified that they regarded Esquire as a threat to public morals.

They had been called as witnesses at the hearing on the question of revoking the second class mailing rights being conducted by the Postoffice Department.

Dr. Solomon Metz, rabbi of Adas Israel Congregation, was the most emphatic.

"It seems to me," he said, "the whole atmosphere of the publication is to reduce the main interest of living to sex."

Used to "Glance" at Esquire

"I am not what you would call a reader of Esquire," Dr. Metz went on, "but I have spent about three hours during the past week going over these copies and I also used to glance at Esquire when I went to the dentist and was awaiting my turn. I used to glance particularly at the cartoons and the pictures which I consider most indecent."

Bruce Bromley, attorney for the publishers of the magazine, conducted a cross-examination of the various witnesses.

Wading into his cross-examination Bromley told the following, which he said was a joke.

"She: 'Would you like to see the place where I was operated on?'"

"He: 'No, I hate hospitals.'"

Destructive of Morals, He Says

Bromley demanded to know if Dr. Metz considered the story destructive of morals and ethics. Destructive of morals the joke certainly was, Dr. Metz answered, of ethics he was not prepared to say.

At this point the questioning appeared to become a little boring and Dr. Metz was asked if he subscribed to Reader's Digest. He asserted he did. Bromley went on with his so-called jokes and Dr. Metz found them of varying shades of indecency.

Bromley interrupted:

"Those jokes appeared in Reader's Digest," he said.

Bad for Children, Holmes Says

Following Dr. Metz to the stand was Dr. Chester W. Holmes, an assistant superintendent of Washington schools, who said he was testifying only on his opinion of whether or not the magazine was fit for consumption of school children. He said it was not.

The Rev. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of Immaculate Conception Church, said the type of subjects emphasized by Esquire "needed no encouragement."

"You are aware, Father Cartwright, that the Catholic Digest frequently reprints matter from this magazine?" Bromley asked.

"I think if it did it used very bad judgment," said the priest.

Bromley then asked Father Cartwright if he knew Father Flanagan of Boys Town, and receiving "yes" as an answer, asked if he knew that Father Flanagan was a contributor to Esquire.

"No." Father Cartwright replied and added that: "I wouldn't agree with his judgment if he was (a contributor)."

Pictures Indecent, Pastor Says

Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, said it was his idea the articles and pictures in Esquire, to which his attention had been drawn, were definitely indecent.

He said they contributed to the "impression that the tendency of such jokes, articles and pictures is to circulate the impression that virginity and chastity is a thing to be joked about and that its absence is prevalent and widespread."

Dr. Marshall was then asked what he had found indecent in one of the cartons depicting a girl in a wedding dress working at a lathe, with the caption: "She came directly from the wedding—Boy! that's patriotism."

Dr. Marshall said he believed the wedding and resultant honeymoon "is definitely sexual."

Q. "Well isn't a wedding definitely sexual."

A. "Not necessarily."

200 Singers Sought For Christmas Eve Musical Program

Two hundred singers are needed to participate in a Christmas program that will feature Sergt. Virgil Fox, concert organist, to be held Christmas Eve at the First Congregational Church.

Singers who have had some glee club, oratorio or choir experience are particularly asked to sign up. They need not be churchgoers, and newcomers to Washington will be welcome. The choir will be under the supervision of Ruby Smith Stahl, director of the A Cappella Choir, which has presented many concerts at Constitution Hall.

Rehearsals will be held every Monday until Christmas at 8 p. m. at the First Congregational Church, with the first one scheduled next Monday. Applications may be made by phoning Columbia 4890 before noon or at 7:30 p. m. on rehearsal nights.

Utility, Union Ask Increase In Wages for Gas Workers

The Regional War Labor Board yesterday was asked to grant a one-half of 1 per cent wage increase to some 1400 workers of the Washington Gas Light Co. and its subsidiaries in a "joint letter" from the company and the District of Columbia Gas Workers Union, J. Loren Freund, union secretary, announced.

A request for a 2 per cent wage boost, due the workers under a contract of June, 1942, was denied by the WLB October 12, when it was argued that "present rates already compared favorably with the earnings of workers engaged in similar occupations in this area."

Asking for reconsideration of the case, the joint letter pointed out that the gas workers had still 0.42 per cent coming to them under the Little Steel formula since their over-all wage increases since January 1, 1942, only amounted to 14.58 per cent, according to figures filed with the WLB.

"Without discussing further justification for the original demand for a 2 per cent increase," the letter asked the board to correct its "violation of WLB policy" as laid down in the Little Steel formula.

The wage boost, "preferably one-half of one per cent, but at least 0.42 per cent," was demanded to be made retroactive to October 1, 1942.

David L. McGonegal is president of the union which is not affiliated with any national labor organization.

Victory Sidelights

Youth Faces Ration Book Accusation

Mack Legrand, 18, Negro, of 411 B st. se., was placed under $300 bond yesterday in Municipal Court on a charge of illegally possessing three War Ration Books. The case was continued until next Wednesday so that OPA inspectors may determine ownership of the books. Police said Legrand erased the proper names from the books and inserted his own name on one book, leaving the other two blank.

To Hear Correspondent

Ernest Pope, foreign correspondent, will describe to the Cornell Alumni Club at its meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Garden House of the Dodge Hotel some of his experiences in Europe both before and after the war started.

He will speak of the time he spent as a Nazi prisoner and give an inside view on Hitler's 'h'ome' life. Pope is in the foreign broadcast intelligence service of the Federal Communications Commission.

Stressing the "ultra-critical" need," salvage officials said they had learned that nearby paper mills had been forced to close down for one or two days a week because of the shortage of waste paper.

Tips to Soldiers In Moslem Countries

Walking down the streets of Moslem countries—and that includes North Africa, Egypt, Syria and Iraq—American servicemen and women will find the women veiled across the face and clothed in a garment, usually white, which extends from the shoulders to the ground. Under this, bright-colored garments are worn, but these are shown only in the privacy of the home, for a Moslem woman is not supposed to look attractive in public.

If she is out with her husband or another male member of her family, she walks several paces behind him. When she stops to do some shopping, strange men must not loiter near her and should she be obliged to raise her veil during this shopping, men are supposed to look away.

Halt Desk-Chair Spread: Kick, Roll, Stretch

By Ida Jean Kain

It is not the sitting that brings on a desk chair spread. It is the fact that you are not out playing tennis! The omission of exercise is what puts fat pads on this big figure problem.

Just how it happens is somewhat of a mystery. Weight, apparently, has little to do with it. Even though you do not exceed your calories, you can—and probably do—take on weight along the hipline. This padding takes all shapes, but the most bumptious form is in the little mounds of fat, like old-fashioned pincushions, that perch on the top of the hips to the rearward.

The exercises that are effective in dislodging this particular fat padding are the staccato side-back kick, rolling to bring the weight smack on the target, and a thorough side- stretcher.

Movement: Slowly move the right leg out and back, sideward, in a short but vigorous thrust from the hip with both knees straight throughout. Do not sway out to the opposite side. Very slowly, repeat six times, then perform the same number of counts with the other leg.

A straight roll across the hips is an unusually efficient streamliner. So include this one.

Position: Lie on back on floor, legs together, very slightly off the floor.

Movement: Roll straight across the upper hipline and over, until you are face downward on the floor, then roll back across the large part of the hips and make a complete circle in the other direction, finishing on the other side, and face downward. Start with 12 counts, gradually work up to 25, and finally to 50.

Position: Stand erect with feet apart, arms upstretched over head.

Movement: Stretch vigorously all along one side by bending in the opposite direction and slightly backward so as to have most of the stretch through the fat pad. Come back to center and repeat to the other side. Make this a slow, thorough-going stretch. Perform 12 counts, later 25.

Pretty and practical, this pencil-slim suit. Shepherd plaid jacket with covert skirt and lapels.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Heartsick Over Her Fiance's Careless Habit Of Breaking Dates Without Advance Notice, Girl, 19, Asks Whether She Should Marry Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been thinking about writing you for some time. The trouble is, I have been in love with a boy who was a classmate of mine until last year. He is now in the Ar Corps Reserve; and in February he will graduate from Tech High School. We decided in September that we would be married as soon as he gets his diploma,—even though we knew he would be leaving immediately afterward. But I don't know just what to plan on now. He says he loves me and would be lost without me; but lately I find it hard to believe he loves me at all.

Jimmie is 20 and I am 19. Both of us come from unhappy homes and we know what it means when a marriage is unhappy. I am afraid to get married for fear he would neglect me. As I have no mother to turn to, maybe you can tell me how Jimmie and I can get back on the road to happiness. Miss Haworth, if a boy really loves a girl, do you think he would go out with a crowd of boys after a football game, instead of keeping a date with her (when she is his fiancee)? This is what Jimmie did, without even calling me. I was so worried I didn't know what to do. The next morning, I telephoned his home and his mother answered. She called Jimmie, but he didn't get up. When she asked if there was a message, I told her to tell him not to bother to call me back. But when he got up, he did call and asked to see me that night. I said I didn't want to get dressed for a date and be "stood up" again. He assured me this wouldn't happen, so I let him come.

We went to the movies, at his suggestion; so I didn't have a chance to discuss anything with him. At parting, he said he would not be able to see me this week, but would call me. He did call me the next two nights, but we couldn't say much, as other people were in the room. He said he would call again last night; so I waited by the telephone until 11 p. m. and he still hadn't called, so I went to bed. This morning I had circles around my eyes and lines in my brow, from frowning in my sleep. I have a job; and I cannot afford to go on this way. But I love him and don't want to lose him. So what can I do?

This Is Not Love; It's Morbid Fixation

DEAR L. T. B.: If you want to get back on the road to happiness, the first thing to do is this: Abandon the idea of marrying Jimmie. That piece of advice cannot be too strongly emphasized. We can't do anything to erase the lines from your brow and the circles from beneath your eyes, nor to lift the crushing load of misery from your spirit, unless you take that advice to heart,—by accepting it as gospel and acting upon it. You say you love Jimmie. That isn't so. You have become obsessed with Jimmie,—which is a different emotion altogether. To the extent that you permit him to "walk over" your feelings and cripple your self-confidence,—as he is progressively doing by his careless, egoistic mistreatment of you,—to that extent do you become more seriously involved in the slavish, obsessive conviction that your sole hope of happiness depends upon having Jimmie treat you decently.

The fact that you "come from an unhappy home" and have none but me to turn to for advice also sheds light on the morbid significance of your whipped-puppy fixation on Jimmie. You need love (as who doesn't?). You need very greatly the soul-sustaining assurance that you are "away out in front" in somebody's estimation. You need this assurance not only to warm the cockles of your heart; but to keep your self-esteem at par, or well above. If you had such special devotion from some important source,—from a mother or a dad who were "swell persons" by anybody's reckoning; or from a lifelong boy friend who was like a "big brother," who never let you down when you besought their sympathetic understanding and moral support,—you would have brushed off Jimmie a long time ago, as an insufferably bad-mannered smarty who made the mistake of his young life in thinking he could treat you like an old rag doll.

Twofold Cause Of Boy's Behavior

THERE IS a twofold explanation of Jimmie's careless procedure in relation to you. On the one hand, he isn't a first-quality character. He has no finer sensibilities, or he would not constantly humiliate and distress you by the conduct described. The old saying, "Punctuality is the courtesy of kings," stresses the noble virtue of dependability of behavior in one's social relationships. Jimmie lives by no such precepts,—lacking the delicacy of instinct which prompts true consideration; and, obviously, lacking also the background training-in-responsibility which begets punctilio. On the other hand, you are almost equally to blame for the indignities he visits on you,—due to your "thankful-for-crumbs" clutching at him. For instance, in the matter of telephoning him the morning after he "stood you up," you put yourself in the position of being a craven nuisance. A man cannot love a girl who fails to compel his respect; nor can he respect a girl who lets him mistreat her. So, in process of letting him kick you around, so to speak, you have given him cause to despise you,—which accounts for his increasingly contemptuous assumption that he may do as he boorishly pleases, where you are concerned; and you can like it or lump it.

FOR SPECIFIC advice: Don't give Jimmie another date. The minute you have scored on that point, you will begin to feel better. You will make a rapid recovery from this misguided infatuation from that time on. Break off with him, in your own heart, now. Break completely and finally,—fortified by the knowledge that this fizzled-out romance was a flash-in-the-pan that has taught you, through suffering, the importance of exacting careful consideration from the male sex, if you are to enjoy a happy relationship with them. When Jimmy calls again, as I suppose he will,—if you let him alone long enough to arouse his curiosity,—just tell him that you don't want to see him again; that you have nothing to say to him; and that you have finished bothering about him, because experience has proved he is "the little man who wasn't there." And then hang up. But begin right now casting your nets for another best beau. "A new love" is the sure cure for youth's romantic blues.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Teen-Age Talk

It's not hard to please the teen-age crowd when Christmas comes. Give them something they can use, something practical but pretty and gay. Make them yourself but start making them now.

Here are some suggestions that fairly burst at the seams with Christmas spirit. Directions for making these and other gifts are available in sewing books that cost 10 cents.

Make a Scarf—

Here is a distinctive scarf with a wide border of ever popular fringe. It's easy to make and you can listen to your favorite radio program or have a nice chat while you make it.

The Trimmings—

Here are the kind of trimmings that rate with any school girl from junior to senior high school. A gay colored belt, embroidery trimmed; lapel ornaments made in the shape of hearts or little dolls (you can use all your odd bits of yarn for these); or a crocheted necklace and earring set to match.

Make a Pair of Mittens—

This is one pair we'll bet won't be lost. Something new in mitten designs, crocheted in wool and with a drawstring tie around the wrist. Make the palm and back of contrasting colors.

Make a Hat—

Any fashion-minded miss would love to have a crocheted Dutch bonnet like this. You can make it in bright colors and besides looking mighty pretty over those long tresses it will keep her head warm this winter.

Make a Pair of Lounge Socks—

Crochet a sole on an ordinary pair of anklets, and there you've got a pair of lounging socks! They'll be the first thing she'll reach for when she comes home after school.

Make an Evening Bag—

This is a good bag for teen agers because it's big enough to hold a few cosmetics and a change purse, and small enough to tuck in a coat pocket. You could make it in faille or velveteen for evening; in corduroy for sportswear.

Call NAtional 4200, Extension 324, between 9 and 5:30 and we'll tell you where to find the sewing book containing the directions—price, 10 cents.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Having fed her baby from infancy, any mother is eager to shift some of the responsibility for self-feeding to the year-old child. He has learned to drink from a cup, now why can't he feed himself by spoon?

Children of this age can hold a spoon but have very little general ability to load it successfully and bring the load to where it will do the most good. Most children tilt the spoon sidewise as it travels up, leaving a trail of good cereal from dish to mouth. Until the child is 21 months or more, most of the responsibility for feeding him has to be borne by the parent, even while she works to make him acquainted with the use of commonplace feeding utensils.

The child's attempts to hold his cup should be encouraged by using a small cup with an ounce or two of milk which he can negotiate with ease. The spoon can be held in his hand and with it he can imitate the mother's movements as she puts it into the cereal, shovel-like, and lifts it to his month.

When he wants to help she guides his hand by putting her finger under the spoon to keep it right-side up until he deposits its contents. She watches baby to note signs of weariness or satiety and a propensity then to throw spoon, cups and their contents over the side of the chair.

Children can manage only one food at a time and that in small quantitities. Unless tied in their chairs they grow restless and want to stand up and entertain themselves teetering about instead of attending to the business at hand.

When baby is learning to handle a spoon or cup there should be no scolding emphasis upon tidiness. Of course, he'll pick up food in his fingers as well as stir the food with them. These are passing phases of the whole ceremony of learning to eat.

Once he has mastered it he'll want to feed himself most but not all of the time. Not, presumably, until he is at least 28 to 36 months can he be counted upon to manage this at every meal.

Our leaflet, "Teaching Use of Cup and Spoon," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

About Washington . . .

YOU WOULDN'T THINK it could happen in this enlightened era . . . but it did. A Washington woman who had just purchased a house in Chevy Chase asked the current occupant when she expected to move. "I don't know—yet; I haven't had time to consult my fortune teller," was the answer. And the woman wasn't joking, either; for she added, in an equally serious tone, "I never make a move of any kind without that precaution" . . . Back in town after an extended tour to the West is Olga Moore (Mrs. Carl F. Arnold), the writer, whose latest short stories appear in the current issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine . . . Also returned to Washington is Mrs. Walter Raleigh Amesbury, who spent the past few days in New York, where she went to attend a benefit tea for the Lower East Side Boys Club, a board member of which she has been for some time. She took along with her 60 dozen cookies, which she baked herself, as her contribution to the event. Formerly, an outstanding textile designer in New York, Mrs. Amesbury also served on 39 welfare and educational committees. She came to Washington last autumn with her husband, Lieut. Amesbury, USN, who is stationed here . . . Senora de Somoza, wife of the President of Nicaragua, and mother of Senora de Sevilla Sacasa, wife of the Nicaraguan Ambassador, has arrived in Washington for a visit.

OUR TOWN is to have a new art gallery. Located in an ante-bellum gingerbread home opposite the house where General Grant lived in 1860, the place will be known as The G Place Gallery. It will be devoted to painting, sculpture and the graphic arts and will be the scene of a preview reception on Sunday night from 9 o'clock until midnight.

Caresse Crosby, who has been associated with progressive art and artists since she owned and managed the Black Sun Press in Paris, and David Porter, whose interest in art for the past 10 years has been centered in the Midwestern painting created in his home town of Chicago, will direct The G Place Gallery (916 G pl.) as partners.

The opening exhibition arranged by Mrs. Crosby is the "summer work" by the leading surrealist painters, Ernst, Matta, Tanguy and Lam. David Porter's part of the first exhibition will feature work by American artists depicting familiar scenes of daily life and carrying out the general theme "Home Sweet Home —USA."

The G Pl. Gallery will be open, free, to the public from 2 p. m. until 8 p. m., each day, including Sundays.

THE TRAVELER, returned from Mexico, who recently gave me a story about King Carol of Rumania and Mme. Lupescu, yesterday answered some further questions about them—three, in fact, that I mentioned in the account of the first interview I had witn him.

(1) Is it true that Mme. Lupescu wants to come to this country to have her face lifted?

Answer: At no time has Mme. Lupescu ever sought entry to this country on such a ridiculous ground. Only once has she asked that permission, and then on the advice of her doctors who ascribed her illness to the high altitude of Mexico. All of the face-lifting stories are Nazi-inspired, in an effort to prejudice American women against her. She has no more need for a face-lift than a 12-year-old child does. Her skin is flawless, perhaps for many reasons—she does not drink, nor smoke; she gets plenty of sleep; she does not dissipate.

(2) Would most Rumanians in America like to have King Carol visit the United States?

"There are more than 30,000 Rumanian nationals in this country, and, judging from the mail received by Carol, the consensus is that they would like for him to be recognized by the United Nations as the authoritative leader of a Free Rumanian government."

(3) Will they ever receive official invitation to visit here?

"The United States Government alone can answer that. King Carol is confident, however, that the United Nations soon will invite him to play an important part in inspiring and encouraging his 20,000,000 people to greater action of resistance against the Nazis."

And that will be all in this column about King Carol and Mme. Lupescu—for quite a while, at least.

HENRY J. KAISER, wizard of the shipbuilding world and newly appointed president of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp., will be one of the guest speakers at next Tuesday's luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club. Sharing honors on the same program will be Mrs. Eugene Meyer, whose story on the incompetent management of Brewster led to an investigation by the House Naval Affairs Committee—an investigation, incidentally, which was directly responsible for Mr. Kaiser's appointment at Brewster.

I understand reservations already are pouring in for the luncheon at which both Mr. Kaiser and Mrs. Meyer will answer questions—either on the record or off, as they choose—about the corporation whose difficulties have been front-page news for the past month.

Alice Pentlarge Tells Women About Salvage

WPB Radio Speaker Informs Housewives On Whys of Conservation Program

By Peggy Preston

Explaining WPB conservation programs to housewives is something of a job.

The need for fat and tin salvage; the conservation of water, gas and fuel may be apparent to business concerns, but Mrs. Jones of Kokomo is apt to think it all a lot of useless regimentation thought up by those "men in Washington." Since Mrs. Jones and her tribe form the most important link in any salvage campaign, WPB decided a year ago to bring an interpreter into their Division of Information.

She is Alice Pentlarge, New York career woman, who contacts Mrs. Jones via radio stations, large and small, scattered all over the country. Miss Pentlarge has all the requirements for the job—a ready wit, an agile mind and a patient smile. She knows what to say to the woman who for one reason or another has decided the whole salvage program is open to question.

MISS ALICE PENTLARGE

"I tell them the story of that tin can or that can of fat," says Miss Pentlarge. "And it really is a pretty thrilling story . . . one that never fails to have the proper effect."

Miss Pentlarge has a wealth of factual knowledge at her finger tips when she tells her story over the air or before women's clubs. She relates how one tablespoon of fat saved from the night's meal will form the base for 73 inoculations for smallpox; how more of this grease, making a base for valuable sulfa drugs and medicines, saves the lives of men on the beaches of the Solomons or Italy.

She Offers Practical Examples

She points out that without tin the Navy would have to be demobilized; that without the olive drab paint made from fat, seaplanes would be rendered useless, and that without tin cans the armies overseas would go without food.

All this and more goes into the story that Alice Pentlarge repeats day in and day out to housewives. "Women are often accused of being arbitrary by nature," she smiles. "Of course, I dont' agree. I just think we like to have things explained to us. We all get the idea pretty clearly when told that two tin cans thrown away in every home in the Nation is like turning another tin mine over to the enemy."

Miss Pentlarge is in Washington temporarily. The New York radio job that she left is awaiting her return from Government service. A native New Yorker, she entered the field of radio seven years ago, because, as she puts it, "I like to talk and I like to write. Radio seemed the best outlet under those circumstances.'

Has One Book To Her Credit

Prior to going into radio, Miss Pentlarge lived abroad for several years. There were three years in Switzerland, during which time she turned her hand to writing a book. Published in England, but not in America, her one and only effort along literary lines was done in collaboration with a retired Spanish diplomat. It is called "Memoirs of a Spanish Diplomat," and tells a story of Spain during the decade of the twenties.

You'll hear her voice frequently over the local radio stations in the coming weeks. Her current project has to do with the WPB conservation program. She'll be telling you exactly why you must turn that light off when you leave a room, why you must not let the faucet drip and why you must close the window when you leave a room. Merely to save water or electricity? Yes, but of even greater importance, she will point out, to conserve man-hours of labor and wear and tear on machinery. She'll tell the story so that Mrs. Jones will understand all the whys and wherefores.

Mrs. Miner at Home To Her Friends

A popular gathering spot in the late afternoon is Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner's pleasant drawing room in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut ave.

With her estate at Greenwich, Conn., still open, Mrs. Worthington makes frequent weekend visits there through the autumn. She is in Washington only until tomorrow, but hopes to come back again next time for a longer stay.

Miss Stallard Becomes Bride Of W. A. Jagger

Now on a wedding trip in New Jersey is William A. Jagger and his bride, the former Miss Eleanor Ann Stallard of Washington.

The bride wore a gown of white taffeta designed with fitted bodice and full skirt. She carried a colonial bouquet and wore pink roses in her hair.

The bride's attendant, Miss Ruth Jagger, sister of the bridegroom wore a pink taffeta dress fashioned like that of the bride's. Mr. John Jagger, brother of the bridegroom, served as the best man. A dinner reception was held at the Jagger home following the ceremony.

Mrs. Jagger attended Oklahoma City University, and is now employed with the State Department in Washington. Mr. Jagger is third class radio technician in the United States Coast Guard Reserves and is stationed in New York City.

Czech Envoy And Mme. Hurban To Be Honored

The Czechoslovak Ambassador and Mme. Hurban will be guests of honor at the United Nations Club dance Sunday evening in the Chauncey Depew home on Massachusetts ave. The use of the home has again been offered the club by the Texas Oil Co., the owners, and the weekly dances, begun the first of October, will be continued through November.

At the invitation of Ambassador and Mme. de Morgenstierne, club members will meet at the Norwegian Embassy the evening of November 9. On November 21, the Netherlands chancery will be open to the club through the courtesy of Ambassador and Mme. Loudon, for a special preview of the Dutch film, "The Silver Fleet."

Iran, Central America and India, respectively, are to be honored at the United Nations Sunday dances on November 14, 21 and 28. Ranking diplomats of the countries will be invited.

Foreign language classes in Russian, French and Spanish are being formed and are open both to members and nonmembers. Miss Suzanne Rosenberg, AD. 0421, is handling arrangements.

Latin-American Program Planned

In a program of Latin-American music, Frederick H. Bloch will be presented by the Pan American Union, on Sunday, the third of a series of Sunday afternoon concerts for servicemen, Government workers and the general public.

The artist, a Czechoslovakian, studied in Paris and in Prague. When the war broke out he fled to Italy, where he temporarily worked in the museums of the Vatican, studying musical folklore. Later he went to Ecuador, where he taught at the Conservatory of Music in Quito and was finally appointed professor of the Central University of Ecuador. In that country he also directed cultural radio programs and did research work of Indian musical folklore. He specialized in collecting national and native music, ritual dances and is following the modern evolution of native music.

Potatoes Tasty, Nutritious in Soup and in Balls

Abundant Potato Crop Offers Good Nutrition At Reasonable Cost

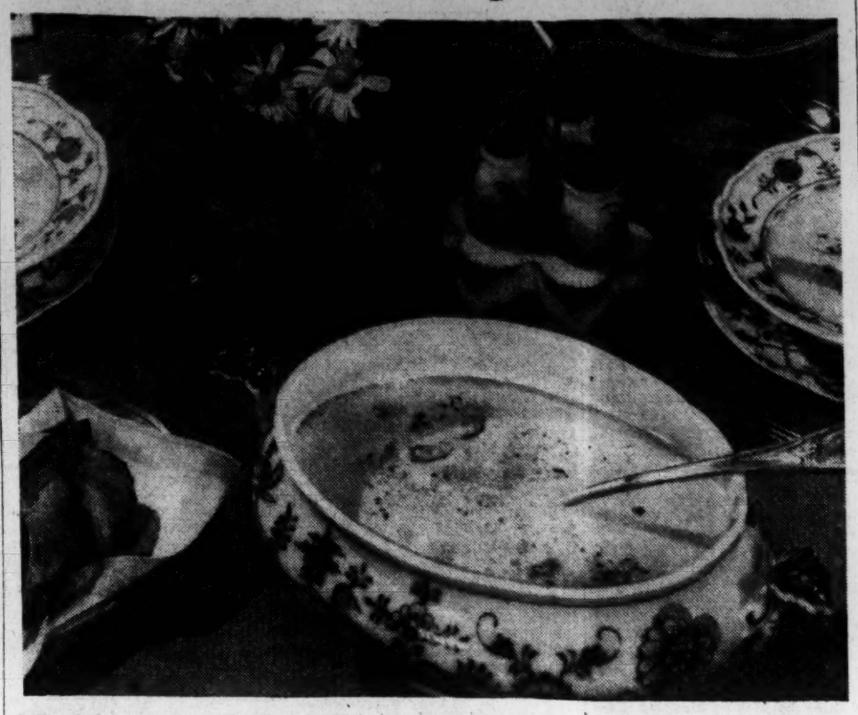
Martha Ellyn

Remember last spring how scarce potatoes were? And many a person remarked, "Oh, what I would give for some potatoes!" Well, the picture is a much happier one now. You can have all the potatoes you want.

Farmers were asked to increase production of potatoes this year. And produce potatoes they have, to the tune of 360 million bushels. That's a lot of potatoes to be stored until consumed. So the Government has asked us not only to eat potatoes, but to store as many as possible in our homes. In utilizing the potatoes we relieve some of the pressure on less abundant foods.

The War Food Administration designated potatoes as the Victory Food, October 21 to November 6. But when Saturday, November 6, rolls around, it doesn't mean that we are to stop eating and buying potatoes. Potatoes are a valuable food. Under and within the jacket of the Irish potato are important foodstuffs — vitamins, minerals and vegetable protein, and because they are a starchy vegetable they are a good energy food.

We should use potatoes wisely to get the best from them. So



bake them, boil them in the jackets and eat the skins. Pare them just before they are to be cooked. Never, never soak potatoes in water, if you do you will lose vitamins and minerals.

You can't do better by potatoes than to bake them and then use in a baked potato soup. You have never heard of such use for a baked potato? Well, once you have tried this economical, delicious soup you will be glad you have heard about it.

In Marjorie Mills' new cook book, "Cooking on a Ration," you will find a number of recipes for hearty, filling soups that can serve as the main dish at lunch or supper. Among the recipes is the one for baked potato soup.

You will want the recipe for this provokingly savory soup. Double the recipe, or triple it, if you have company coming. And if you are having guests give them this treat. The following is a suggested menu:

Dinner Menu

Baked Potato Soup
Toasted Garlic Loaf
Green Salad Bowl
Baked Apples Beverage

Get a loaf of French bread, slice it, rub with garlic, spread with fortified margarine and then toast. And if you want to lift a baked apple to new heights, stuff with peanuts, brown sugar and a flavoring of anise or allspice. And now for the soup.

BAKED POTATO SOUP

Split 3 baked, mealy potatoes, take out the pulp, mash and whip well with 3 tablespoons hot milk. Cook 2 thin slices onion in 2 tablespoons fortified margarine. Add mashed potatoes and onion to 1 quart well-seasoned chicken stock. Beat 1 egg yolk and add a little of the hot soup, stirring until smooth, then add ½ cup cream or rich milk and combine with the hot potato and chicken mixture. The soup must not boil after the egg yolk is added. Season well and garnish with chopped parsley.

You will find this a simple dish to prepare. And it is inexpensive if made with bouillon cubes. Serves four.

If you want to cook potatoes in advance and reheat when ready to serve, you will find mashed potato balls with cornflakes a delicious and ready way to prepare them.

Send baked potato soup to the table in grandma's soup tureen. If you have old pepper shakers, fill them with paprika, cayenne and red pepper, then each person can season to taste. America grows her own supply of these caps/cums.

MASHED POTATO BALLS

Prepare mashed potatoes, but use milk sparingly. Then roll the potatoes into balls. Dilute 1 egg with 2 tablespoons water. Roll the balls in the egg and then in crushed cornflakes. Place them in a greased pan. Bake the ball in a moderate oven, 375 degrees, until they are well heated, or fry them in deep fat until brown.

Another way to prepare mashed potato balls is to bake them by the following recipe:

BAKED MASHED POTATO BALLS

Prepare 2 cups well-seasoned mashed potatoes. Beat in 2 egg yolks and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Cool these ingredients slightly. Beat until stiff 2 egg whites. Fold them lightly into the potato mixture. Bake the potatoes in lightly greased muffin tins or drop them on a greased sheet. Bake them in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until they are crisp. Turn them so they will brown evenly.

Stay Home, Says ODT

There is little likelihood that any extra railroad facilities will be available for would-be Thanksgiving travelers. Since the end of September, 1942, the railroads have been prohibited by the Office of Defense Transportation from operating additional trains, special trains, special extra sections or private cars without special ODT permits.

Cottage Cheese Successfully Made In the Home

Since cottage cheese has joined the list of vanishing foods, many persons, especially mothers of babies, are becoming concerned about the lack of it.

Cottage cheese can be made at home, either with or without the use of junket tablets. Following are recipes for making it by both processes:

COTTAGE CHEESE

Beat very slowly 1 quart sour milk to lukewarm over warm water and turn into a strainer lined with cheesecloth. Pour over 1 quart warm water and as soon as water has drained through, pour over another quart; then repeat. Gather cheesecloth around curd to form a bag and let bag hang until curd is free from whey. Moisten with melted butter and cream, sweet or sour. Add salt to taste.

If you want to make it by the junket tablet way, use this recipe:

Heat one quart sweet milk to lukewarm and add one junket tablet reduced to a powder. Let stand in warm place until set. Beat with fork to break curd, turn into bag made of cheesecloth, and let hang until whey has drained from curd. Then proceed as the directions given above.

'Phantom of the Opera' At Best in Third Version

THE STORY of "The Phantom of the Opera," of course, is a familiar film classic to the seasoned picturegoers, who have known it down the years from its first production in 1925, through its second in 1930, to its present third visualization which yesterday took possession of the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, with Nelson Eddy, Susanna Foster and Claude Rains in the stellar roles.

They will find freshness and a measure of novelty, nevertheless, in the splendid balance of music and melodrama and the opulent Technicolor embellishment that mark the current rehabilitation of the time-honored "thriller," first made famous by Lon Chaney, pere.

In its present manifestation furthermore, the piece has been splendidly cast, down to its smallest role whether singing or acting, or both, and tightly and skillfully directed by Arthur Lubin. The net result is a unique entertainment effectively blending the extremes of dramatic expression.

As must be known to everyone by now, the major part of the action takes place in the vast opera house, where a veteran violinist, who has secretly fostered the career of a promising young prima donna, is discharged from the orchestra and launches himself on a career of murder to achieve the ends he no longer can accomplish from income. The operatic sequences, during which most of the crimes are committed, are legitimately introduced and staged on the grandiose scale commensurate with the requirements of grand opera.

When the orgy of crimes leads to the subterranean passages under the giant opera house there is a suggestion of the eerie qualities that mark the passages in "Les Miserables" dedicated to the labyrinthine mysteries of "the sewers of Paris." These episodes, however, supply only the climactic periods of the story and are no more than incidental to many other stirring incidents that set off the magnificence of the opera house, its maze of flyloft and backstage corridors, the foyers, lounges and dressing-rooms, all made the setting of interesting and exciting developments. Altogether, a superlative example of closely integrated and compelling picture-making.

Claude Rains, in the title role, contributes a telling portrayal of the gently ominous "Samaritan" driven mad by the perversity of an unkindly fate and finally doomed by the concerto that might have brought him fame and fortune. But it is the combined vocal brilliance of Susanna Foster, Nelson Eddy and Jane Farrer that gives "Phantom of the Opera" its most valid claim to eminence.

They bring rare beauty to "Lullaby of the Bells," the Russian "Le Prince de Caucasie," the interval of French Opera and the third act of "Martha," which comprise the operatic interludes so vital to the plot and the enjoyment of discriminating music lovers. A large and well-trained chorus supports the singing stars, among whom Tudor Williams and Anthony Marlow deserve to be included.

Mr. Eddy shares with Edgar Barrier such honors as there are in a romantic comedy vein that threads the narrative. Mr. Barrier, by the way, is a newcomer whose performance as Daubert, inspector of the Surete, seems to insure his screen future. Roles of lesser consequence are excellently played by Leo Carrillo, J. Edward Bromberg, Fritz Feld, Frank Puglia, Barbara Everest, Fritz Leiber and numerous others of note.

"Children of Mars," the "This Is America" issue having to do with juvenile delinquency and invading Washington's Doctors Hospital for some of its scenes; "The Old Army Game," a Disney Donald Duck cartoon in color, and an exceptionally interesting release of Pathe News complete a bang-up bill.

'Young Ideas,' Tommy Riggs Combine Nicely at the Capitol

By Marjorie Kelly.

Sophisticated, yet warm-hearted, and very funny indeed is the farce-comedy "Young Ideas," which opened yesterday morning at the Capitol, along with a stage bill headlined by Tommy Riggs and his imaginary girl-friend, Betty Lou.

"Young Ideas" is reminiscent of "The Male Animal" and "Vivacious Lady," two earlier comedies which derived their highly civilized humor from the behavior of a college instructor in love, and from the antics and dilemmas into which his retiring, quiet personality got him when he tried to cope with a passion for an unacademic lady.

This one has a fresh angle, though. The lady in question, played by Mary Astor, is a widowed authoress, who has two bossy grown-up children, charming kids, but a bit too big for their britches. She adores them and lets them dictate to her and manage her life. Except when, after a whirlwind courtship, she marries a chemistry professor and settles down in the small college town where he teaches. The kids feel this provincial life will end their mother's writing career, and descend upon the town prepared to carry her off to New York with them. But she won't go.

Youngsters Take Command

The kids deal with this in their own way, by going to the professor with the information that her latest book, a sometimes witty and bawdy novel about life in Paris, is autobiographical. Then they go to work and plant suspicions of all their mother's male friends in their unfortunate stepfather's mind. Before they finally decide their mother is entitled to live her own life, they have very nearly ruined all chances of her doing so.

Susan Peters and Elliot Reid shine in the roles of the clever, overbearing youngsters, and Herbert Marshall is consistently amusing as the bedeviled professor. Richard Carlson is cast opposite Miss Peters in an appealing little subplot romance, and acquits himself well.

Tommy Riggs, making his first visit to the Capitol in several years, was well received by yesterday morning's audience. Mr. Riggs is unique among dual-voiced comedians. His sprightly and irrepressible Betty Lou got off a few new and many time-honored wheezes, and the audience liked them both.

Those Dogs Again

Funnier, however, was the "Hector and His Pals" act. The pals are a cute red-head named Marian and a brace of dogs of various breeds. The stage is a bedlam, with Hector shouting exhortations, Marian doing tricks amid milling dogs who do nothing they're told to.

The rather labored acrobatics of the Winter Sisters, the ethereal and lovely dancing of the Richards-Adair dancers, and the stylized singing of Patty Pickens and Bob Simmons rounds out a bill that is of great merit.

'Contrast' at C.U.

On view at Catholic University this week is Royall Tyler's "The Contrast," an appropriate beginning of the C. U.'s season of Americana.

It is appropriate because it was the first genuinely American play, written with homespun characters and with no attempt to imitate European plays. In fact, it is an elaborate take-off on the habit prevailing in 1787, when the play was written, of imitating Europe, and contains some fine sturdy American sentiments about the superiority of our own culture.

Probably the biggest laugh in town is the one Ted Tiller emits twice in the course of this production, in his role of the Yankee Jonathan. The very able young actor is down from New York for the duration of "The Contrast." The ability to laugh whole-heartedly and naturally is a prime requirement for an actor playing Jonathan, since much of the action revolves around a foppish imitator-of-all-things-English who tries to impress upon Jonathan that, according to Lord Chesterfield, no gentleman ever laughs out loud.

Gloria Lee Brandt is vivaciously charming in the role of a coquette, Felicia Cetowski is sweetly dramatic, as her serious-minded friend; Verna Gusach properly flippant as a third belle, and Victor Dial superbly effeminate as the roue who courts all three strictly in line with the Gospel according to Lord Chesterfield. M. K.

The Madman Who Haunted and Killed

Gossip From Gotham

New York, Nov. 4.

Cordell Hull, who has just fulfilled a historic mission, once attended an international conference in London, where two of the delegates — from Czechoslovakia and Japan — were bewildered by Hull's strange, Tennessee accent. They listened to the Secretary of State and then the Czech delegate asked the Jap delegate: "Is he speaking French or English?" . . . "Frankly, I don't know," replied the Jap? "But we'll know in a few minutes from the translator. If it's translated into French, then Mr. Hull was speaking English. If it's translated into English, then he was speaking French."

CORDELL HULL

The U. S. Navy has approved, for publication this month, Alexander Griffin's book, "A Ship to Remember." It's the complete story of the "Hornet," its heroic career, its battles, its crew, and finally its death in the Pacific . . . On the day before the carrier was sunk one of the sailors was arrested for an alleged violation of the rules. A trial was set for the next day at 10:30 a. m. Lieut. Dave Berger, who was a lawyer from Philadelphia, was to defend the sailor . . . The next day, when the Hornet was hit by Jap suicide planes, Lieutenant Berger was in the torpedo ready room, which burst into flame. He jumped into the sea, and in the smoke and blood and oil, the first one he saw was the sailor he was to defend. "Mr. Berger, Mr. Berger," said the sailor, "what about my trial?"

Vice President Wallace was in Cleveland last week. He visited the Jack and Heinz Co., where the absenteeism is the lowest in the country. Bill Jack, president of the company which gives its workers high pay, tea, massages, music, free vacations, etc., explained to Wallace about the "Jahco Wolf Call" which greets any absentee upon his return. Wallace asked to hear it, and the workers gave him the wolf call. When the Vice President was about to leave, he delivered a loud wolf call of his own to the men. Five thousand of them, therefore, went to the Cleveland Auditorium, where Wallace was to speak, and delayed his broadcast for 70 seconds with loud and happy wolf calls at the Vice President of the United States.

Monday night a revival of "Petrified Forest" was presented at the New Amsterdam Roof. Because the theater has been dark for many years, no floor plan existed, and tickets were based upon a rough sketch of the orchestra seating-plan. All the center aisle tickets were printed for the right side, and all the right-side tickets were printed for the left side . . . When Frank Sinatra sang for the WAVES at the SSS Hunter, he was disappointed at not hearing any enthusiastic applause. The commandant then told the girls: "Remove your gloves." After that, the deluge . . . Admiral Rosendahl visited the Capacabana, and requested Joe E. Lewis to sing his famous Pants-Too-Long song. "I'm tired of hearing myself sing it," Lewis stated. Rosendahl insisted: "But I want to hear it, even if you don't." Lewis therefore sang it while wearing earmuffs.

The Washington
Merry-Go-Round
By Drew Pearson

HARD-BOILED MEMBERS of the Diplomatic Corps, whose countries' lives hung in the balance at Moscow, have microscopically examined the texts and come to certain definite conclusions. These are:

1. Moscow achieved more than the diplomats expected, but less than the window-dressing has now led the public to believe.

2. The word "finis" was written under the Baltic states—Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. Though not mentioned in the texts, they will be taken over by Russia.

3. Poland's future will depend entirely upon how far it is willing to cooperate with Russia. If it plays ball, Poland can live peacefully beside Russia as a cooperating Slav state. If it doesn't play ball, it will be largely gobbled up.

4. Although no definite agreements were reached on many things, machinery was organized for future agreement. This may be most important of all.

Difficult problems have to be threshed out gradually and the proof of the pudding is in the eating.

Baltic States Disappear

READING BETWEEN THE LINES and piecing together the diplomatic grapevine reports leaking back from Moscow, diplomats have arrived at the conclusion that Stalin took exactly the same stand regarding the Baltic states at Moscow as he has in the past—that the Baltics were no more up for discussion than is the return of Texas, Arizona, New Mexico and California to Mexico. The Baltic states, according to the Soviet view, were carved out of the old Russian Empire when she was prostrate and helpless during the last war, and were deliberately constructed by British imperialists in order to shut Leningrad off from the sea.

Stalin has made it clear that he would no more permit foreign states along the Gulf of Finland than we would permit small independent republics to be set up in Connecticut and Long Island guarding the entrance to New York Harbor.

As reported in this column in the spring of 1942, Molotoff secured an agreement from the British at that time for the return of the Baltic states and one-half of Poland to Russia. But the United States objected. Diplomats now conclude that at Moscow Secretary Hull withdrew that objection and fell back on the United States declaration at Riga of April 6, 1922, when the Baltic states were first recognized. It was then said:

"It is entirely possible or even probable that some time in the indefinite future these so-called states may once again become an integral part of Russia."

Poland's Position

MOST SIGNIFICANT PORTION of the Moscow pacts, and the only one signed by Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill, was regarding punishment for atrocities.

Buried in the text of this agreement is an insignificant-appearing, but nevertheless most important statement that "Germans who take part in wholesale shootings of Polish officers . . . will be brought back to the scene of their crimes," etc.

This settles once and for all the question which has bitterly disturbed Russian-Polish relations, namely the massacre of 10,000 Polish officers at Smolensk, and the Polish-German claim that actually they were massacred by Russians. Roosevelt and Churchill now have signed their names to a declaration which puts the blame squarely on the Nazis and leaves no more room for argument.

The fact that this one pact was singled out above all the others for the signature of Stalin, Roosevelt and Churchill indicates the importance the Russians attached to it. This, plus the fact that the British had already agreed in 1942 to restore Russian Poland to Poland, is viewed by diplomats to mean that Poland's future is largely up to her ability to keep on friendly terms with Russia.

It is believed that Stalin consented to hold up any partition of Poland, as originally agreed with the British, and to wait and see how things worked out. This was in return for American promises of security guarantees. But he did insist that the main sore-spot between the Poles and Russia, the alleged massacre of Polish officers at Smolensk, be settled for all time.

Thus the future of Poland probably rests largely in the hands of the Polish people themselves and their ability to get along with their fellow Slavs.

Mine Union Friction

Current rumors are that John L. Lewis and his daughter Kathryn have had a falling out. These are untrue. But it is true that there has been friction inside the United Mine Workers revolving around Miss Lewis.

John L. Lewis' son, John, is like his mother—quiet, amiable. Lewis' daughter Kathryn is like himself—aggressive, opinionated. She loves and worships her father, never could quarrel with him. But she has had violent rows with Ora Gassaway, former president of District 50, the catch-all branch of the United Mine Workers, which organizes chemical workers, dairy farmers, etc.

Gassaway is an old coal-mine mule driver, who like Lewis, boasts that he once knocked out a mule with a blow of his fist.

Gassaway has had several rows with Kathryn. He went into tantrums, complained that while he was supposed to be the head of District 50, Kathryn Lewis was the real head.

"She dictates those letters and makes me sign them," he complained.

After one row, Kathryn took a "sabbatical" leave in Taos, N. Mex., staying away from Washington for some time. On another occasion Gassaway walked into her office and let loose a string of epithets, following which she took another leave and was retired for "ill-health."

There is seldom a dull moment around John L. Lewis.

Merry-Go-Round

MRS. HENRY C. WALLACE, mother of the Vice President, belongs to a very exclusive club. Membership is limited to women who have had six children, divided equally between the sexes. Mrs. Wallace had three boys (Henry, James and John), and three girls (Mary, Annabelle, and Ruth) . . . For the first time in years, "Room for rent" signs are beginning to appear in Washington windows . . . Discouraged over lack of publicity for the current iron-and-steel scrap drive, WPB officials call it "our confidential drive."

Army Newspaper Opposes Proposal For Home Leave

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Army's combat edition of the Stars and Stripes opposed today the suggestion that experienced American troops be given home leave, saying "it would be foolish to throw away all the battle experience picked up by our veteran troops at so bloody a cost."

"We all want to go home," an editorial said. "The Americans, the British who have been in the war for four long years, the Russians who are so near yet so impossibly apart—and even our enemies, the Germans, want to go home. . . .

"There are other reasons for this show of opposition to the talk of those Washington gentlemen who have just returned from their tour of the foxholes. Ask us for more. If ours could be the decision whether the men go home before this job is done we would say yes, on one condition—that we resurrect the honored dead and take them with us."

Swiss Hit Allied Blacklisting of Pro-Axis Firms

Bern, Switzerland, Nov. 4 (AP).—The Swiss put their foot down today with a decree which hit at Allied blacklists of pro-Axis firms and in effect emphasized their contention that they have the right to trade with the Axis.

If applied in a strictly literal sense, the decree would virtually stop foreign trade by the Swiss.

The Federal Council ordered fines and prison sentences for anyone giving information on exports and imports and forbade business concerns to make declarations to foreign powers which supply information required for import licenses by the British.

The Swiss resent the blacklists as interfering with their neutrality and contend they must trade with Germany to avoid unemployment, economic depression and scarcity of food and coal. They say they are ready to trade with the Allies, too, as far as transportation conditions permit.

Chinese Money Supplied Gas for Lamps of Manila

Port Elizabeth, South Africa, Nov. 4 (AP).—The story of how Manila's industrial and domestic gas supply was furnished for four days by burning millions of Chinese dollars was told aboard the Gripsholm by two repatriates, Clifford Billings, representative of the Manila Gas Holding Co. of New York City, and George Lynott, representative of the American Bank Note Co.

New bills of different denominations for the Chungking National Government, packed in 460 metal and wood cases and totaling 260 million dollars had just arrived in Manila.

When it became evident that Japanese forces would enter Manila it was decided to use the furnaces of the Manila Gas Co. and the Philippine Government's Bureau of Science to destroy the currency. For four days and nights the only fuel that entered the furnaces was crisp new bills printed in the United States.

New Flare Lights Targets in Fog

London, Nov. 4 (AP).—Allied fliers are now using a super-flare—called a "target indicator"—which can be seen by night or day from the substratosphere through almost total cloud.

The new device, particularly valuable in night fog, made possible the record raid last night on Duesseldorf, the Air Ministry said, when the mist was so thick that attack would have been difficult without it.

Canada Makes Striking a Crime

Ottawa, Nov. 4 (AP).—An order-in-council providing fines and imprisonment for any person taking part in a coal strike was disclosed today as the strike of 8500 miners in western Canada reached its fourth day.

The order, passed October 14, was not made public until it appeared in a compilation of Canadian war orders and regulations, although the government previously had termed the current work stoppage illegal.

At WRA Camp

Nips in U.S. Vow Loyalty To Japan

San Francisco, Nov. 4 (AP).—Accounts of sabotage and openly avowed loyalty to Japan came to light today in further revelations of just what happened Monday at the Tule Lake, Calif., segregation center for disloyal Japanese.

Ernest Rhoades, former fire chief at the camp, told interviewers at Klamath Falls, just across the State line in Oregon, that all fire alarm telephones had been destroyed, sand and broken glass were tamped into hydrants, and automobiles were damaged, one having been scratched with the words: "To hell with America."

Robert Cozzens, regional field director for the War Relocation Authority, which has charge of the camp, disclosed here that a "Reverend Kai," Japanese Buddhist priest from Hawaii, told a crowd of his countrymen that "You must give your all for Japan," and after that several thousand took off their hats and bowed their heads.

The crowd which gathered in front of the Tule Lake Administration Building Monday to make demands of Dillon Myer, National WRA Director, has been estimated at from 4000 to 8000. Cozzens said about two-thirds uncovered their heads and bowed after the priest spoke.

The Japanese moved on the Administration Building about 1:30 in the afternoon, held about 75 Government employes inside virtual prisoners, and held their mass meeting in Nipponese until 4:50 p. m.

Their demands included more and better food and changes in the administration personnel. Myer told them he would entertain "requests" but not "demands."

In Washington, Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, ordered two investigations to Tule Lake from his committee's Los Angeles office to look into the situation.

Junior Board's 'Army' Luncheon Not Strictly GI

An "Army ration" luncheon was put on yesterday by the Junior Board of Commerce at its weekly meeting. And it is a good thing no soldiers sat down to it.

Baked beans, frankfurters, bread and butter, and coffee was the board's version of Army rations.

That "chow" might have caused a riot in a concentration camp, and the only person who heartily approved was Ole Olsen of the Sons of Fun Company, who was there with Steve Olsen and Rob Jarvins of the same troupe as entertainers. Ole has long hoped to cut down food waste at luncheons, and this was his first success.

For purposes of comparison, here is what soldiers in garrisons ate yesterday: Fricasse of veal, oven-browned potatoes, buttered cauliflower, apple and celery salad, bread and butter, bread pudding with vanila sauce, and coffee.

Dairymen Seek To Cut Butterfat Content of Cream

Butterfat content of cream sold in Washington will be reduced if the request of local dairymen is granted today when representatives of the local milk handlers are to meet with the War Food Administration.

A recent Administration order banned the selling of sour cream and cottage cheese in an effort to conserve fats. Sale of cream was reduced by 25 per cent. These moves were designed to divert more butterfats into manufacture of cheese and butter for lend-lease, the Army and civilian use.

However, as the result of reduced milk production, the dairies here find themselves cutting cream production as required, but still are unable to divert any additional butterfat to cheese making.

Bowles Confirmed As Chief of OPA

Chester Bowles of Connecticut was confirmed by the Senate today as price administrator. He succeeds former Senator Prentiss M. Brown of Michigan, resigned. He was confirmed without objection or discussion.

District Man Sentenced In Mail Fraud

John J. Engel, whose District address was given as 1745 Irving st. nw., was one of three men sentenced yesterday to 18 months in Federal prison and to pay fines of $500 each after guilty pleas to an indictment charging violation of the Securities Act, mail fraud and conspiracy in Brooklyn, N. Y., Federal Court yesterday.

Engel was accused with John R. Williams, of Cranford, N. J., and Carl Schroeder of Queens, N. Y., of mail frauds amounting to about $250,000 between 1938 and 1941 in metropolitan New York and in Michigan, Pennsylvania and Maryland. The indictment charged false statements of profits of American Capital and Credit Corporation.

The indictment also charged that deceptive entries were made on company books and assets overvalued to reflect falsely surpluses from operating profits.

Engel was said by Mrs. Annie L. Oderman, of the Irving st. address, to be a former occupant of the premises.

Soviet Has Own Peace Ideas, Spellman Says

New York, Nov. 4 (AP).—Russia has her own ideas about peace and also about boundaries, according to Archbishop Francis J. Spellman, and "moreover, Mr. Stalin is not obliged to ask anyone either in Russia or outside of Russia about putting his ideas into effect."

Writing in Collier's Weekly, the New York archbishop declared in a series of letters to his father that "the United States and England are fighting a World War on many fronts, and Russia is fighting on only one front. . . . Many wish that Russia would open a second front against Japan or at least permit us the 'use of bases.'"

"However," he added, "there are no mass meetings held in Russia demanding that the Russian authorities go to war against Japan to help us with a second front."

In his letters, written while he was touring Europe, Africa and the Middle East before the capture of Sicily, the invasion of Italy, and before the signing of the tripartite agreement, Archbishop Spellman said "England and America must ever acknowledge Russia's indispensable help. . . . While we have not yet opened a second front in the sense that Russia desires, . . . still there is no denying that our strategic bombing of Germany's industrial plants is a very definite second front."

Archbishop Spellman said that while German production was declining, "we are sending to Russia more planes, tanks and motor vehicles than to any other front," and added that "it gives one a very definite sensation of cooperation actually to witness the transfer."

Hecht Rewards 24 Employes for War Bond Efforts

More than $1200 in War Bonds were given to employes of The Hecht Co for exceptional effort during the Third War Loan, when the store exceeded its quota by more than 100 per cent. The awards were received by 24 members of the store family, in denominations of $25 to $100 each. The store's quota was set at $400,000, and the final tabulation showed that $850,000 worth of War Bonds had been sold by employes during the drive.

In addition, 14 special citations were awarded to department heads for meritorious service, based on the largest increases over departmental quotas. The citations were presented by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the store, as a token of appreciation from the management.

Edward Ehrlich, merchandise manager, received the Treasury certificate for bringing in the greatest total of the store's eight divisions. Ehrlich's division finished the drive with a total of $137,000 in War Bond sales.

A special Treasury Citation was awarded to Dulcan for the store's publicity and selling support in the campaign.

Order Clarifies Manufacturers' WMC Essentiality

Clarifying the essentiality status of a manufacturing establishment under War Manpower Commission rules, orders have been issued to local plants designating all shops with at least 75 per cent of activities in war production as "essential," the WMC announced yesterday.

"Essential" plants receive priorities in workers' referral by the United States Employment Service and on employes in an "essential" activity can quit without receiving a release from his employer or the USES.

The memorandum pointed out, however, that "whenever the essential activities of an establishment are separate and distinct from those which are unclassified or not deferrable, the establishment should be designated as essential only with reference to the essential portion of its activities."
